Sweeping Investigation Promised on Bond Deals

Tobey Describes Practice as Tragic'; Meyers Case Rushed For Grand Jury

By The Associated Press

The Senate Banking Committee ll look into Government bond eculation not only by Maj. Gen. nnett E. Meyers, but by "many ers," Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) clared yesterday.

Meantime, the Justice Depart- nt rushed preparations to seek dictment of Meyers. Starting me time this week, grand jurors ll go to work on the task of termining whether the retired r Force procurement officer all be formally charged with r frauds, perjury and income evasion.

The United Press reported the tice Department may recom- d that Meyers be indicted on ast seven charges carrying a ximum penalty of $629,500 in s and 39 years in prison. It d the charges as follows:

r fraud, maximum penalty, 00 fine and 10 years in prison; y, $2000 fine and five years son; subornation of perjury ring someone to commit per- $2000 and five years; bribery, 000 (three times the $200,000 ers allegedly tried to obtain Planemaker Howard Hughes) three years; extortion, $500 ne year; conspiracy to de- $10,000 and 10 years; income asion, $5000 and five years h count of an indictment.]

Charges Possible

artment officials said there e other charges but this will l on examination of the evi-

ng other things, Meyers was d before the Senate War igating Committee of setting war subcontracting firm with y officers and drawing large its from it. His explanation he established the company ecause the wife of its president, erie Lamarre, was his "girl end" was hotly denied by La- arre.

Winding up its inquiry Satur- ay, the War Investigating Com- mittee requested the Banking Committee, headed by Tobey, to look into the broad subject of speculation in Government bonds.

For a long time there have been reports of wartime bond "free riding" which, while not illegal, has been frowned upon by Federal officials.

Bond Purchases Related

During the Senate investigation Meyers testified that he and his wife bought four million dollars worth of Treasury bonds on margin and rolled up a "paper profit" of about $90,000.

Meyers said he was able to acquire bonds by putting up 1 per cent in cash, then borrowing the balance from banks at 1 per cent interest.

The bonds paid 2 per cent, thus permitting a speculator to double his investment with the bonds at par value—100. For every point the bond market climbed, the profit rose, too.

Tobey told a reporter he has been making a personal survey of speculation in Government bonds for six months.

"It's evident that there was and is scalping of profits going on," Tobey said. "The Banking Committee is going to look into the matter just as soon as possible."

He added that probably won't be until some time after the first of the year.

Army Heads Confer

Tobey said there "are indications that some banks made a practice" of making 1 per cent loans for bond purchases, "knowing the Government would not let the bonds fall below par."

"It was a cinch," Tobey said. "It really would be laughable if it were not so tragic."

What the next move by the War Investigating Subcommittee would be, now that its investigation of Meyers is over, was not disclosed.

Arrested Judge Not a Brother of Justice Murphy

Circuit Judge George B. Murphy, who was arrested in Detroit Saturday night on drunk driving charges following a traffic accident, is not related to United States Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy.

The Washington Post printed an incorrect dispatch from the International News Service which identified the arrested man as a brother of the Supreme Court Justice.

The justice's brother, 50-year-old Judge George Murphy of Recorder's Court, who in no way was connected with this accident, is one of Michigan's hardest working jurists. He has served 12 years on the bench and has just been re-elected for another six-year term starting in January. He is a veteran of the Naval Air Service in World War I and served with distinction on an aircraft carrier in the South Pacific in World War II.

The Washington Post wishes to express its regret and to offer its apologies to the family of Justice Murphy.

Elizabeth, 'Serenely Happy,' Attends Church With Philip

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

NOT SO DIFFERENT—Except that they're British royalty, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip might be any young couple the world over, taking a stroll during the first days of their honeymoon. This is at Broadlands, home of the Earl of Mountbatten, at Romsey, England. It could be Niagara Falls

Mrs. Lois Guerrieri, 32-year-old Washington housewife who was guest at an afternoon royal wedding party, tells family about it all. Story on Page 2.

Romsey, England, Novfl 23 (AP).—A serenely happy Princess Elizabeth and her prince were cheered into thousand-year-old Romsey Abbey today and cheered again as they left by a throng of Channel country folk in their Sunday best.

The princess wore her mist-blue going-away suit for the couple's first appearance since their wedding Thursday. Prince Philip, wearing a dark civilian suit and blue polka-dot tie, towered over his trim wife as they took places among the congregation.

The Rev. Canon W. B. Corban, the vicar, welcomed them at the door, but took no note of the royal honeymooners in the service. It might have been the morning service in any Episcopal Church, except for the thousands outside.

Canon Corban chose as his text the eighteenth verse of the fourth chapter of the Second Corinthians:

Archbishop Ryan, 60, of Omaha, Dies

Outspoken Philosopher Was Former Rector Of Catholic University

The Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, 60, Archbishop of Omaha and onetime rector here of Catholic University of America, died yesterday at Omaha, Nebr.

Widely known as an outspoken philosopher, educator and welfare worker, he left Catholic University 12 years ago when he was named Bishop of Omaha. In 1945, when the diocese was made an archdiocese, he was elevated to Archbishop.

Archbishop Ryan, a native of Indianapolis, Ind., had suffered asthma for many years. He died in St. Joseph's Hospital in Omaha.

A former professor of psychology of St. Mary of the Woods College, Terre Haute, Ind., and later teacher of philosophy at Catholic University, he was the author of many works on religious philosophy. Despite his forthright manner he won his place in the hearts of Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

There were many occasions when the 60-year-old Indianapolis-born cleric felt called upon to speak his mind.

In 1938, long before the world was fully aware of the danger of Adolf Hitler, the then-bishop spoke of the Nazis' "low and nasty human passions—envy, jealousy, rapacity . . ." He asked "how human nature could sink to such low levels of sadistic barbarism . . ."

A year before he condemned the

Rift With Taft Denied by White, Republican Whip

Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine, disclosed tonight that he recently submitted to the Senate Republican Policy Committee his resignation as Senate Republican floor leader, but that the resignation was declined.

Senator White said he was making the disclosure because of reports that he had resigned as the result of a difference of opinion with Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the policy group, and an avowed 1948 Republican Presidential aspirant.

Senator White denied that there was "a suggestion of a controversy between Senator Taft and me." He said he had tried to resign because of the press of his other duties as chairman of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, and member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Belgian Villagers to Get Back Bedsheets That Won a Battle

Winchester, Mass., Nov. 23 (AP).—Church bells of this community rang out today just as they did on Christmas Day, 1944, in the Belgian village of Hemroulle—and for the same reason.

The story starts on that white but not pleasant Christmas Day:

Marshal von Rundstedt's German forces, having found a weak spot in the Ardennes Forest south of Aachen, were advancing toward the tiny village of Hemroulle.

The job of a battalion of the 101st Airborne Division, commanded by Lieut. Col. John D. Hanlon of Winchester, was to defend a hill north of Bastogne near Hemroulle.

"Our dark uniforms against the white background would have made us perfect targets," Hanlon said, adding: "We needed camouflage—lots of it and fast. Bed sheets were the obvious answer.

"I went to the mayor of Hemroulle and told him of our dilemma. I promised that if he would collect the sheets from his people I would make every effort to return them. Why I promised I don't know," Hanlon said, "but we wanted those sheets badly."

The mayor, whom Hanlon describes as a graying oldster who had seen his village invaded during two wars, quickly agreed to help.

"As I walked back to my command post," Hanlon continued, "I heard the church bell ring.

"The villagers streamed to the church and when they arrived the mayor, waiting at the door, told them simply: 'Bring here as many

Ban...Loan Curbs Held In Making

Officials Reported Drafting Plans; Bankers Attack Buying Restraints

Government plans to curb bank loans were reported being drafted yesterday, while the American Bankers Association loosed a blast at installment buying controls.

Final touches on the Government plan, which was reported to include both voluntary and compulsory restraints on bank loans which might be "inflationary," were expected to be completed at a meeting here this week. The meeting, it was said, would bring together Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board; Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, and members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

It was expected banks would be asked to adopt some restraints voluntarily. Congress then would be requested to authorize even more stringent controls to be applied in case of need.

Bank Supervisors Cooperate

Government sources said the program was being prepared in cooperation with the National Association of State Bank Supervisors and would include these voluntary measures:

1. Discourage borrowing where funds would be used for speculation.

2. Limit all new loans as far as possible to undertakings which would increase the supply of consumer goods or otherwise tend to hold down inflationary pressures.

The more drastic restrictions were expected to be requested by Treasury Secretary Snyder and R. M. Evans, member of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors when they appear before congressional committees today and tomorrow. These restrictions would:

1. Authorize the Federal Reserve Board to increase the total of reserve funds each bank in the system is required to set aside to back up bank loans and deposits.

Would Restore Authority

2. Restore the board's authority to control consumer credit, including short-term bank loans. The board may ask for stand-by power to require a 50 per cent down payment with a 12-month limit on installments.

It was this latter proposition which the American Bankers Association unexpectedly attacked yesterday as "unwise," on the ground it would force consumers to deplete their savings to buy essential goods. The bankers' statement was unexpected in that the credit curb was considered least controversial of President Truman's proposals for price stabilization.

The bankers contended that consumer credit represented but a small fraction of public buying power and was essential to enable those in lower income brackets to purchase furniture, household appliances, automobiles and other durable goods. They warned Congress against any action which would:

"Tend to put pressure on people to redeem their Government securities or to spend their savings by depriving them of the means for purchasing out of their incomes

New Cabinet Is Completed By Schuman

French Premier Now Confronted by Threat of Labor Disorders in Paris

Paris (Monday), Nov. 24 (AP).—Premier Robert Schuman ended France's four-day-old political crisis early today by announcing the formation of a coalition government, but immediately was confronted by the threat of labor disorders expected to break out in Paris within a few hours.

The 61-year-old Schuman's government was France's seventh since the liberation from the Nazis and war composed of six members of Schuman's Popular Republican Movement (MRP), five members of the Socialist Party's right wing, three middle-of-the-road Radical Socialists and one moderate Independent Republican.

As Schuman announced his government after 36 hours of dickering with the leaders of all the major political parties except the Communists and Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rally of the French People, troops, mobile guardsmen and police guarded Paris, ready for trouble expected at 6 a. m. when the Paris subway opens with increased fares.

Troops Rushed to Paris

The troops were rushed into Paris yesterday and reservists of the 1947 class were ordered to report immediately to Fontainebleau, 40 miles south of Paris.

The new cabinet as announced by Schuman:

Premier—Robert Schuman (MRP);
Foreign Affairs—Georges Bidault (MRP);
Interior—Jules Moch (Socialist);
Justice—Andre Marie (Radical Socialist);
Armed Forces—Pierre Henri Teitgen (MRP);
Social Affairs, including labor—Daniel Mayer (Socialist);
Overseas—Paul Coste-Floret (MRP);
Public works—Chistain Pineau (Socialist);
Economic affairs and finance—Rene Mayer (Radical Socialist);
National education—Marcel Naegelen (Socialist);
Reconstruction—Rene Coty (Independent Republican);
War Veterans—Francois Mitterand (Radical Socialist);
Commerce and Industry—Robert Lacoste (Socialist);
Agriculture—Pierre Pflimlin (MRP);
Public health—Mme. Poinso-Chapuis (MRP);

The premier also appointed five secretaries of state. They were:

Secretary of state for the premier's office—Pierre Abelin (MRP);
Secretary of state for German affairs—Pierre Schneiter (MRP);
Secretary of state for war—Paul Bechard (Socialist);
Secretary of state for air—Andre Maroselli (Radical Socialist);
Secretary of state for the navy—Joannes Dupraz (MRP).

Ramadier Declines Post

Schuman, Bidault, Moch, Marie, Teitgen, Mayer, Naegelen and Lacoste all served in the cabinet of Schuman's predecessor, Paul Ramadier, who declined appointment as minister of the interior, offering poor health as his reason.

The Washington Post Poll

A strong majority in greater Washington favors continuing rent controls beyond next March, The Washington Post Poll reports.

Seventy-seven per cent want to keep the lid on rents. Only 12 per cent favor dropping rent controls next spring, while 11 per cent have not yet arrived at a conclusion.

If controls go off next March, 55 per cent of local residents expect rents to increase sharply, while 29 per cent predict moderate boosts.

(National rent controls are scheduled to expire February 29. Congress gave the District an extra month of grace, with controls set to expire here on March 31.)

Washigtonians are not entirely unmoved by landlords' pleas for higher rents, however. Twenty-two per cent say all rents should be allowed to go up some even if rent controls are continued, while another 33 per cent would permit increases in some cases.

Nineteen per cent of renters think some increase in their own rents would be fair, and more would be willing to take a boost if landlords made repairs and improvements which, in their opinion, are long overdue.

Within the last year about one of every seven renters has had his or her rent boosted, while the rest are still paying the same as before the provision for voluntary increases. In 1 out of 20 cases landlords have tried to raise the rent, but have failed because tenants

U. S. Bread-Grain Production Well Below Russia's This Year

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

In spite of the largest wheat crop in history, the United States fell far below Russia in the production of bread grains, wheat and rye this year, the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations revealed last night.

The report of the Department of Agriculture agency coincided with two actions taken by Secretary Anderson to increase next year's world food supply:

1. Anderson disclosed he is considering a meeting of the world's ministers of agriculture to raise next year's production, not only of agriculture but of other food industries, notably fisheries. To be invited will be ministers from the countries that formerly had exportable surpluses, but whose production is now lagging behind prewar.

2. Announcement of this year's crop goals for this country, "calling on farmers for top production not greatly different from wartime totals."

The goals seek a total of 356 million acres, of which 296 million will be for cultivated crops and the balance for hay crops. This is nine million acres above 1947.

The report on wheat and rye production for the world estimates that Russian production of these two main bread grains will exceed this country by 363 million bushels.

The estimates seem to bear out reports that Russia may have a considerable amount of bread grains for export later in this crop year.

However, the report does not give records for other crops. If corn, of which Russia produces virtually none, were considered, this country's total grain probably would top Russia by millions of bushels.

The total crop of wheat and rye in this country was 1,432,166,000 bushels.

The total Russian crop, Agriculture estimated, was 1,795,000,000 bushels.

The big lead was due to an enormous rye crop in Russia, estimated at 920 million bushels compared with this country's meager 25 million.

The United States had a big lead in wheat production. American wheat totaled 1,406,000,000 bushels, compared with 875 million for Russian.

Both countries produced 13 bushels of rye to an acre. But advanced farming methods, better

Stassen Asks Truman to End Red Shipments

Candidate Charges U. S. Policy Aimed At 'Appeasement'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 23.—Harold E. Stassen telegraphed President Truman today, asking him to reverse his position and to order an embargo on shipment of machines to Russia. He charged that the present administration policy is one of "economic appeasement."

Stassen's telegram followed a statement by Mr. Truman on Friday that he saw no reason to stop American shipments to Russia.

The former Minnesota Governor, a Republican aspirant to the Presidency, "Respectfully" called to Mr. Truman's attention six reasons for halting the flow of American hard goods to Russia, one of them being that the United States should not contribute to the building of "a Communist war machine."

Stassen, who is to end his 12-State delegate hunt tomorrow night at a major rally in Milwaukee, Wisc., began calling for an em-

Plaster Cracked As Earthquake Shakes Montana

Butte, Montana, Nov 23 (AP).—An earthquake felt throughout Montana and causing minor damage here was recorded by the Montana School of Mines seismograph at 2:46:45 a. m. today.

Prof. Stephen Nile of the school said the earth shook for about an hour, but the sharpest shock lasted only 10 seconds.

The shock cracked plaster in some Butte homes but there was no other reported damage. The shock was also fairly strong at Helena, Kalispell, Havre, Malta, Glasgow, Bozeman, Livingston, Lewistown and Missoula, but no damage was reported in those cities.

The quake was the 2877th tremor for Helena since October, 1935, when four persons were killed under crumbling walls. Earthquakes have been felt intermittently at Helena since June, 1925.

Pope Appeals To Catholics In U. S. for Aid

Thanks Americans For European Help And Asks for More

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Nov. 23 (AP).—Pope Pius XII expressed gratitude tonight for what Americans have done in helping the distressed peoples of Europe, and added "we hope you will save them again from their hopelessness."

In a radio address to the United States, the Pope bespoke the support of Catholics for the American bishops' campaign to obtain food for the needy of Europe.

The text of his broadcast follows:

Beloved children of America:

Another winter is approaching, heartless and relentless, which promises to cut a wide swathe through the ruined, ineffectual tenements of hundreds of cities in Europe and the East, opening the way for grim death to follow fast on cold and famine and stark exposure unimpeded; but, no! there stands Christian charity, rising to the full stature of its nobility, to block the path, and thousands of doomed victims, freed from a hopeless terror, will live on to thank God for the spirit that unites all men as children of their Father who is in Heaven, and makes their hearts beat fast with sympathy for their brothers in suffering and distress.

Under the tireless leadership of a large-hearted, devoted hierarchy you, beloved sons and daughters in America, are in the vanguard of that army of Christian charity.

This year you have chosen, and chosen well, to amass your resources during a week characterized in your country by the dominant note of thanksgiving to God. The highest authority of the state has summoned you—and what an ennobling and refreshing summons it is to hear in the world today—to pause in the midst of your varied occupations to render thanks to Almighty God, the Father of light from whom is every good and perfect gift (James 1:17).

In the words of the angel of the schools, your gratitude must first be an ascknowledgement that you are the recipients of gifts, unnumbered gifts, then it demands that you give thanks for the gifts received, and lastly that you in turn

House Expected to Vote Today For Trial of 10 Movie Figures

By the United Press

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) predicted yesterday that the House will approve contempt citations against 10 top-flight Hollywood writers and directors today by an "overwhelming majority."

The movie personalities were cited by the Un-American Activities Committee during its recent Communism-in-Hollywood investigations when they refused to answer yes or no to the question whether they are or ever have been Communists.

The House is scheduled to act on the citations today. If they are approved—and it is virtually certain they will be—they will be sent to the United States District Attorney for prosecution.

Conviction carries a possible maximum penalty of one year in prison and/or a $1000 fine.

McDowell, a member of the committee, said he will present the committee's first case, against movie writer Albert Maltz, immediately after Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) explains the background and aims of the Hollywood investigation.

"My statement on the Maltz case will take care of the argument that the civil rights of these people have been violated," McDowell said.

The 10 witnesses contended the committee had no more right to ask them whether thy are Communists than it did to ask whether they were Republicans or Democrats.

McDowell said congressional committees have a right to ask a

Senate Opens Aid Debate Today; Quick Passage Seen

House Due to Get Stopgap Bill by End Of Week After Committee Delays

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Senate debate on stopgap aid to Europe will be opened today with prompt passage forecast by Republican leaders.

In the House, the President's 597-million-dollar measure was expected to reach the floor the latter part of the week. Prospects there were not so bright, with the House Foreign Affairs Committee writing a relief bill of its own and delay threatened in the Rules Committee, through which it must be routed.

Debate in the Senate will be launched by Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Foreign Relations Committee, which has unanimously approved the bill and, in a special report, urged its prompt enactment. In "hoping" for passage by the Senate this week, Vandenberg added that he would encourage "full and free debate" even though it prolonged consideration of the measure.

War Reds Blamed For Plight

The House yesterday received from its special committee investigating foreign aid a report which charged that Russia as much as the war itself was to blame for Europe's unhappy state. This, it said, was due to Russia's failure to take part in any plan for recovery and the lack of trade between countries of western Europe.

"A major contributing factor . . . of equal importance with the obvious destruction and dislocation caused by war, is the inability of the countries of western Europe to trade on normal terms with the countries under Soviet control," the committee said.

"Russian officials and the Communists in all countries," the committee continued, "have utilized every opportunity to attack as 'imperialism' the proposals for continued aid from the United States to Europe, while at the same time satellite countries with relatively good crops and no drought sat on their supplies or were drained of them by Russia."

Materials Payment Suggested

The committee, headed by Representative Herter (R., Mass.), urged the United States to accept strategic materials as part payment for aid under the long-range Marshall Plan and approved in general extension of allocation, transportation and export controls. It expressly asked that full publicity be given to American efforts to assist European countries in the present crisis.

In addition, the committee recommended that:

1. The United States enter into long-term agreements with recipient nations for delivery of critical materials to rebuild stockpiles in this country depleted by the war. These materials would be credited as payment for assistance.

2. Small amounts of "incentive goods" such as tobacco, cigarettes and shoes, be included in shipments to provide a means of inducing higher production.

3. A proposed new foreign-aid corporation responsible to Congress should be authorized to administer allocations and controls.

4. An intensive domestic soil conservation should accompany the program to avoid depletion in the effort to attain maximum production.

5. Free grants to Europe should be limited to food, fuel and fertilizer. The Export-Import and

Sammy Baugh Has a 'Day,' Pitches 6 Touchdown Passes

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The gifted Sammy Baugh, presented with a shiny new station wagon before the game, eloquently expressed his thanks to 35,361 Washington citizens yesterday with six touchdown passes against the Chicago Cardinals.

They came to honor Baugh, dubious perhaps of what the day would bring at Griffith Stadium, with the Redskins pitted against the best defensive team in the National Football League. What the day brought was a flabbergasting 45-21 victory for the Redskins.

Every shade of political belief was probably represented in the stands, but Washington achieved a complete and joyous unity for at least one afternoon as Baugh continued to pitch touchdowns against the hoodwinked Chicagoans.

There were other Redskin heroes—Paul McKee, who caught seven of Baugh's passes, two for touchdowns, and mud-caked John Adams who towered at a tackle job—but in the magnificence of Sammy's throwing arm Washington fans got their biggest belt of the lean Redskin season.

Summoned to midfield before the game, Baugh was eulogized by Attorney General Tom Clark and President Les Arries of the Touchdown Club, as a deluxe station wagon tooled through the stadium gates onto the gridiron.

In a polite thank-you speech, Baugh expressed his gratitude "to the fans of Washington, the finest fans a man could play before," and the crowd applauded.

And then, in the first five minutes of the opening quarter, Baugh began to stage his show. Three passes, three completions, and the Redskins had a 7-0 lead. By the end of the first quarter, Baugh had thrown five passes, completed five and the Cardinals were trailing, 14-0.

Early in the third quarter, it had become a 24-7 rout. Hugh Taylor went into the Redskins' line-up and on his first play caught a Baugh pass in the end zone. Baugh was distributing his favors. Four touchdown passes to four different receivers.

Like animated chocolate soldiers, Baugh's receivers were springing up in the mud of the gridiron to catch 25 of the 33 pitches he made, as the crowd marveled and the bewildered Cardinals looked at each other in disbelief.

There was yet another thrill for the Redskin supporters—this one provided by Charley Trippi of the Cardinals. Eighty-two yards he zig-zagged across the goal line with a Redskin punt and the crowd was seeing the well-advertised Trippi at his sensational best. Then they learned it was wonderfully unofficial, with Trippi's score nullified by a roughing-the-kicker penalty upfield.

Molotov Reaches London for Parley

Speculation on Outcome of Big Four Meeting Mounts as Diplomats Gather

By John M. Hightower

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov arrived by plane today for the Big Four conference on Germany and Austria, amid mounting speculation over the outcome of the sessions opening Tuesday.

Soon after Molotov's arrival, the Soviet embassy announced that his principal aid in the discussions would be Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, who will come to London "as soon as permitted by his duties" at the United Nations in New York.

Other leaders of the Soviet team will be Marshal V. O. Sokolovsky, Russian commander in chief in Germany; Georgi N. Zarubin, Russian ambassador here, and A. A. Smirnov, Soviet representative in the deputy foreign ministers' council discussions on Germany and Austria.

Some Optimism Apparent

Some guarded optimism was apparent both in British press reports and in official comment here.

British informants said Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, as host to the gathering, might see Molotov and Secretary of State George Marshall tomorrow. French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, who has been weathering a political crisis at home, is not due until tomorrow night.

Such optimism as was expressed here was to the effect that the meeting need not necessarily fail and ought at least to bring completion of a treaty for Austrian independence. In New York the Republican leader John Foster Dulles, leaving by plane to serve as an adviser to Marshall, declared that with resolution and high purpose "good will come of" the London meeting.

As for the German political and economic problems to be taken up here and the task of finishing the Austrian pact, Dulles, who arrived here today, said that "generally you don't get agreement with the Russians until the last quarter hour."

"Infinite Patience" Promised

Two British Sunday papers, the Independent Observer and the conservative Sunday Times, expressed the opinion that the conference could reach constructive agreements. The Observer described the British approach to the Austrian pact as one of "cautious optimism."

A foreign office spokesman declined for his part to underwrite the idea of optimism but said Bevin could be expected to display "infinite patience" in the negotiations.

Diplomats speculated that at the embassy, Molotov would receive from Andrei Smirnov, his deputy in the preliminary talks here, a report on the failure of the deputies to agree upon an agenda for the German-Austria meeting. The United States, Britain and France were able to agree on a schedule which would have given priority to an Austrian settlement. Smirnov, however, evidently under instructions from the Kremlin, declined this arrangement.

Others who arrived for the Tuesday meeting included American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith from Moscow, American Gen. Lucius D. Clay from Berlin and French Ambassador Georges Catroux from Moscow.

Excitement ran higher than the night before Christmas at the Guerrieri home yesterday.

At a heavily laden dinner table, where she was making up for some of the meals she missed in England, Mrs. Lois Guerrieri was telling her family all about the trip.

If she said ". . . and I said to the King . . ." she wasn't coloring the story for her four wide-eyed children, her mother and her husband.

Mrs. Guerrieri, 32-year-old housewife and part-time dressmaker, has been on a virtual Cinderella journey to London, where she attended an afternoon party at St. James's Palace; met and shook hands with the King and Queen.

She returned to Washington early Sunday morning after arriving in New York from Shannon, Eire, via TWA's airliner Taj Mahal.

It was a surprise for the family when she rapped on the door of their upstairs duplex at 1724 S st. se., about 1 a. m. She originally had planed to remain in New York Saturday night.

The two younger children, Mary Ann, 3, and Lois Marie, 5, slept through the subdued welcoming, doubled by the surprise visit of Mrs. Guerrieri's mother, Mrs. A. P. Arlington of St. Louis, who was waiting when Mrs. Guerrieri returned.

Laden with presents—and with a bit of the ould sod from Ireland—Mrs. Guerrieri wanted a square meal most of all when she arrived.

"I've been living on tea and chewing gum since I reached England," she smiled a little grimly. But the thrill of the trip was still with her in the stories she recounted for the family.

Mrs. Guerrieri made a green taffeta dress for Princess Elizabeth; sent it to her as a wedding present because "I had heard clothing was being curtailed in England."

She was sent to England for the party by The Washington Post and cabled back accounts of her experiences each day.

Her husband, Louis, a specifications writer and computer with the District Engineering department, stayed home to care for the children during her trip.

She will make quite a ceremony out of sprinkling the Irish soil on a lot they are paying for in nearby Temple Hills Park, Md., and on which they hope to build a house "some day."

Second only to the meeting with the King and Queen and the ocean flight was her impression of England's lack of food—"or food as we think of it."

"They just don't have it," she said, "or if they do, I couldn't find it."

A huge baked ham with all the trimmings, and a chocolate cake, baked by the expert cake-baking son, Richard, 12, adorned the table for dinner last night.

Mrs. Guerrieri chatted happily through the day narrating the story of how her improvised hat (two corsages wired together) attracted attention of the Queen, and brought about the introduction.

The royal family even "ran interference" for her through the crowd of 2000 or more in St. James's Palace that afternoon.

"I had seen all the presents. I had met the King and Queen; seen all the fabulous paintings in the palace and I figured it was time to go, but I couldn't get through the crowd," she said.

"As the royal family walked through the crowd, I just stepped in behind them.

"Then when we got near a door, I headed for it."

U. S. Pushes Palestine Split On Eve of Vote

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Stepped-up American support encouraged backers of the partition of Palestine tonight on the eve of the first crucial United Nations vote on Palestine's future.

The initial balloting was scheduled for tomorrow night, with U. N. officials hoping for a final decision on Wednesday.

The outcome hinged on a dozen on-the-fence countries, whose votes in the U. N.'s special, 57-nation Palestine Committee will determine whether partition—already backed by a simple majority of the United Nations—will get the necessary two thirds backing. The Arab states count 13, and probably 14 "no" votes, making it necessary for partition advocates to collect 28 or more.

An informal United Press scoresheet showed 20 definite votes for partition, at least nine abstentions and 12 to 15 other delegations still undecided or secretive about their positions.

Increased American campaigning among the doubtful states, both in and out of the big Palestine committee, heartened officials of the Jewish Agency and other supporters of partition. They expressed confidence the necessary two thirds support was certain.

Arabs, surprisingly brief and softspoken in the final stages of discussion of the problem so long responsible for emotion and violence in the Middle East, made no counterclaims on the outcome. They said the vote would tell soon enough.

From several sources, including the British delegation and the Jewish agency, it was learned that American officials were applying more pressure to doubtful countries, particularly a handful of Latin-American states whose votes might make or break the partition program.

2800 Children On Cyprus Given Palestine Entry

Jerusalem, Nov. 23.—British authorities have agreed to permit 2800 Jewish children held in the illegal immigrant camps of Cyprus to enter Palestine immediately, it was learned today. Some 500 of the children are 3 years of age and under and the agreement included permission for their parents to enter the country as well.

The agreement was reported to have been reached Friday, after long negotiations between the mandate government and the Jewish Agency for Palestine. Its effect will be to remove all children under 3 from the camps, all orphans and all unaccompanied children, leaving behind only about 590 Jews between the ages of 3 and 18 who have one parent or both with them.

Another effect will be to reduce the population of the wire-ringed camps of tents and army huts from more than 18,000 to possibly 14,500.

which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

The princess wore a brooch on her blue jacket and stirng of pearls about her neck.

Of Philip the crowd murmured: "How different." Romsey is used to seeing him in a naval uniform on visits to his uncle, Earl Mountbatten. Today he was a serious young man in a blue suit taking his wife to church.

The couple was led to cane-bottomed chairs in the first row of the nave. The Mountbatten family pew is elevated and at one side. The prince and princess preferred to sit in the less conspicuous place among the town's worshipers.

Philip sat on the aisle, then came Elizabeth, then an empty seat. The next chair was occupied by a uniformed officer. The rest of the row was empty.

There were not enough hymnals for the congregatoin of 1000 to 1500 and ushers distributed leaflets with the words of songs. The musical part of the service was arranged about the hymns, "All People That on Earth Do Dwell," "Praise, My Soul, the King of Heaven," and "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Elizabeth and Philip each held a leaflet, Elizabeth holding hers high with a brown-gloved hand and joining in the singing.

Senate to Open Debate Today On Stopgap Aid Measure

World Banks, the committee pointed out, were prepared to handle loans for productive equipment.

The proposal for a foreign-aid corporation was backed by the United States Chamber of Commerce in a statement which also urged "immediate, decisive and constructive action to aid Europe." The chamber differed with the National Association of Manufacturers in indorsing help to any needy country regardless of its "political ideology . . . so long as the essential human freedoms, as set forth in the Bill of Rights, are preserved."

Would Halt Dismantling

The chamber recommended that economic affairs in Germany be placed under a civilian board and that "further dismantling of German productive and manufacturing facilities be held in suspense." German plants are being dismantled for war reparations and to prevent reestablishment of an industrial potential for war.

Austrian Asks Big 4 to Go Back to Mississippi, Volga

Vienna, Austria, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Interior Minister Ferdinand Graf asked the four occupation powers today to "pack up their musette bags and go back to the Volga and the Mississippi."

Weary of the delay by the big four in writing a treaty to restore Austria's independence, he said in a speech at Salzburg:

"Austria's future cannot lie either at the Mississippi or the Volga. It lies at the Danube. The Big Four Foreign Ministers should bear this in mind at their meeting in London.

"Austria wants to be a free country without dictatorship. Our present 'freedom' is surrounded by bayonets—there is no freedom."

Graf added that Austria wants to be really free, not subjected either to "the Golden West nor to the political East." Austria when free, he said, will grant extraterritorial privileges to the embassies of foreign nations "and to nothing else."

Graf warned Austrians against exaggerated optimism over the chance that the Big Four in London would write the Austrian treaty. But, he said, "We have done everything possible to ... serve a treaty and we do not co... stitute a threat or danger to a... country."

Of the Communists he said: "The Communist seed of ... struction can grow only in ... soaked with blood. Wherever ... sheets as you have; the Americans need them.'"

The mayor, according to Hanlon, also told the vilagers of his promise to return them.

"Within an hour," Hanlon said, "every sheet in Hemroulle was ours. Old ladies deposited large bundles of hand-made linen on the church steps; children struggled with arm loads; one man brought in a sled load, collected from several homes."

With the sheets came personal messages from the frantic villagers. One of them scrawled in English read, "God bless you Americans."

Hanlon said the battle lasted 20 minutes and the final count was six German tanks destroyed, 67 enemy dead and 35 captured. American casualties were three slightly wounded men.

"The sheets paid off for us. You can't hit, as the saying goes, what you can't see.

"A few days later we moved on to other fields. The sheets went with us.

"A week or two later the snow disappeared and with it the sheets."

"Recently came the jolt," Hanlon went on. "A group of American reporters returned to Europe to view the battlefields three years later.

"The villagers told one reporter that all was now well with them, 'but,' they said cautiously, 'we do wish that the American who promised to return our sheets would do so now.'"

Today, church bells pealed in Winchester summoning the townspeople to the high school auditorium. A squadron of Navy planes flew overhead from the Squantum base.

Word had gone around earlier that 500 sheets were needed for the people of Hemroulle, Belgium.

The townspeople brought with them 711 sheets and pledges of at least 300 more.

The sheets will be sent to Hemroulle through Baron Robert Silvercruys, Belgian Ambassador at Washington, with a transcript and pictures of the ceremonies held at the auditorium.

Mrs. Kenneth B. Toye, chairman of the committee in charge of the sheet collection, said Secretary of State George C. Marshall had requested a transcript and pictures and notified the committee he hoped the movement would become Nation-wide.

Sen. Cain Urges Joint Effort to Rebuild Germany

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) said yesterday the United States should join France and Britain in building "a new Germany" if Russia refuses at the current London Big Four conference to agree on a peace settlement.

"For the good of civilization, Germany must be rebuilt," Cain said in a radio interview over WEAM, Arlington, Va., "we all pray that Russia will join with us."

Cain, who recently made his own survey of European conditions on a jeep-tour of the continent, added that he could see "little reason to believe" that the London conference will produce harmony between the western democracies and Russia over the future of Germany.

Crisis Grips World, Morrison Tells Britons

Sheffield, England, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison said today that Britons must endure austerity because the economic crisis "has caught the whole world with is pants down, as the Americans say."

He told a Yorkshire regional council of the Labor Party that "we must work and wait." Morrison assailed Winston Churchill's cry of "set the people free" as nonsense. "If you have shortages you must have controls," he said.

'Cop in Every Kitchen' Held Truman's Aim

The Republican Party leadership lashed out anew yesterday at President Truman's antiinflation program, charging it threatened to establish "a cop in every kitchen."

The attack came in an editorial by Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in the official Republican News." The publication will not appear until Tuesday, but copies of the editorial were released to the press yesterday.

"Mr. Truman proposed totalitarian methods at home to curb totalitarianism abroad," Reece charged, ing politics with human misery"

He said the President was "playand had "cast his lot irrevocably with the left-wing groups."

"Practically every item on Mr. Truman's proposed control program has been tried out by his own administration in recent years and discarded as unworkable," the chairman concluded.

Reece charged that President Truman, by asking Congress for selective rationing and price controls, may have "rendered a distinct disservice to those in need of relief abroad."

"Only by assuming that Mr. Truman was actuated by a rather extreme brand of partisanship is it possible to find any logical basis for his proposal to revive the discredited system of wartime controls over the Nation's economy," he said.

"Undoubtedly Mr. Truman realized how remote were the prospects that Congress would give him the controls he recommended. . . . But he could have visualized a situation in which he could assert that Administration failures to check the inflationary spiral set off by its own bungling were caused by the fact that Congress had not heeded his recommendations.

"The cold fact is that our present serious degree of inflation is the inevitable result of the New Deal - Democrat administration's policies over the past 14 years—inflation of the currency through deficit financing."

the things they need badly enough to buy at present prices."

In that category, prices continued rising yesterday, the Associated Press index of 35 wholesale commodities reaching a new high for all time of 202.26 per cent of the 1926 average. Bank deposits were reported at nearly 80 billion dollars as of October 6, a decline of 150 million from September, 1946, but 2 billion more than last June.

Already thoroughly at odds over means of meeting high prices, Congress yesterday had these diverse views tossed in its lap:

1. Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican National Committee denounced as "a cop in every kitchen" philosophy the President's request for reserve authority to fix prices and ration consumer goods.

2. The American Veterans Committee urged Congress to restore rationing and price controls over essential materials to combat "the most severe price inflation in the Nation's history."

3. Machinery manufacturers demanded reduced tax rates for corporations and wealthy individuals as a means of providing more capital to expand production. Without prompt reductions, said George Terbough, research director for the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, the United States cannot "avoid economic degeneration which has overtaken such countries as England and France."

NAM Hits Truman Plan

4. President Earl Bunting of the National Association of Manufacturers blasted President Truman's proposals as "the imposition of controls which he himself recently characterized as 'police state.'" He told the annual meeting of the National Editorial Association at Chicago that expansion of Government power would not check the "real" causes of inflation and called for more production.

5. Henry J. Kaiser, over the American Broadcasting System, urged a tax incentive plan to stimulate production. He said a wartime high exemption for depreciation of new plant facilities resulted in vast expansion and should be adopted now.

6. The National Federation of Small Business called for help in the form of renewed rent controls on commercial buildings in a telegram to Mr. Truman. The federation told the President it still was opposed to Government controls over business, but felt that if residential rent controls were to be reestablished, commercial controls should be restored also.

Congressional work on price reduction legislation will continue this week with committee meetings set to study views and proposals. The Senate Banking Committee opens hearings today on the consumer credit question and hopes to have a bill ready by December 1.

The Joint Economic Committee, headed by Senator Taft (R., Ohio), was scheduled to hear Agriculture Department officials on those recommendations of the President which touch on farm problems.

Catholics Inaugurate Food Drive for Europe

"THANKSGIVING CAMPAIGN"—Food collections for Europe were begun at the inauguration of a "Thanksgiving Campaign" in Catholic Churches throughout the country yesterday. seed, etc., are credited with providing a yield in this country of 19 bushels of wheat per acre, compared with only 11.7 bushels in the Soviet Union.

The American wheat crop, 1402 million bushels, was almost double the 1935-1939 average of 758 million. In contrast, the Russian wheat crop was only 870 million bushels, compared with its 1935-39 average of 1124 million bushels. The Soviet's rye crop was only slightly above the prewar average.

Secretary Anderson's proposal for an early meeting of the ministers of agriculture particularly those from countries formerly producing exportable surpluses, is given emphasis by the OFAR report.

In Many Areas Below Normal

The figures show that food production in many areas is far below prewar normal.

The production of the two bread grains in Europe outside Russia, due to the worst growing weather in years and to ravages of war, lack of fertilizers, etc., was more than 800 million bushels below prewar averages—or 230 million bushels more than the 570 million bushels this country is straining to export to all food-deficit areas this year.

Wheat production in Europe was only 1020 million bushels, compared with a prewar average of 1588 million. Rye dropped from 763 million bushels prewar to 520 million. Total African production was 130 million compared with 143 million; South America fell from 281 million prewar bushels to 237 million this year.

Canada, Australia and Mexico all showed marked gains over prewar.

Rye production in the United States was almost 20 million bushels under prewar—or about 45 per cent. Canadian rye production jumped from nine million prewar to 13 million this year.

In announcing it goals for next year, the department again emphasized the possibility of lower meat supplies.

Meat Goals Under '47 Output

"Livestock goals," it said, "will not provide all the meat needed to fulfill demand, but they represent the maximum believed possible in order to save the greater amount of grain.

"Production of meat in 1948 at goal levels would total about 21.3 billion pounds, compared with 23 billion in 1947.

"This would provide about 143 pounds of meat per capita for domestic consumption, compared with this year's 156 pounds per person.

"Goals for dairy products (the same as 1947) are set as high as practicable, in view of further decreases in cow numbers during the past year and the smaller feed grain supply available.

"Poultry goals are revised in accordance with the President's Citizens Food Committee program."

Detailed Figures

The 1948 goals and this year's indicated acreage or production include:

Pope Thanks Americans

make whatever offering your position allows to your benefactor. (St. Thomas Aquinas).

But what can you offer to God? "What hast thou that thou has not received?" (1 Cor. 4:7). Must you not pray the prayer of King David:

"Lord God of Israel, our Father from eternity to eternity:

"Thine, O Lord, is the magnificence and power and glory and victory, and to Thee is praise.

"For all that is in Heaven and in earth is Thine;

"Thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and Thou art above all princes.

"Thine are riches and Thine is the glory.

"Thou hast dominion over all, in Thy hand is power and might, in Thy hand greatness and the empire of all things.

"Now, therefore, our God, we give thanks to Thee and we praise Thy glorious name." (1—Par. 29: 10—13).

What indeed can you offer to God but your thankful praise and faithful service? For Himself God asks nothing.

But in His infinite love for the human creatures of his omnipotence He has wished to identify Himself with those who do need your offerings.

Make Thanksgiving Beautiful

"For I was hungry," He said, "and you gave Me to eat. I was thirsty and you gave Me to drink; I was a stranger and you took Me in, naked and you covered Me, sick and you visited Me, I was in prison and you came to Me because as long as you did it to one of these, my least brethren, you did it to Me." (Matt. 25:35-36; 40).

What loving condescension on the part of God: Because of it, the generous response you will make to the appeal of your bishops for those who are living in destitution and hunger and whose future is so darkened by the ghastly shadow of disease in body and soul, will lift your souls up from the common chorus of grateful acknowledgement of God's gifts, the holy imitation of that divine bounty which has enriched you with so many blessings. Your Thanksgiving will be purified, perfected and made beauteous by charity.

Beloved children, you have been made acquainted with the appalling condition of millions of men, women and children, guiltless prey to the cruel, often unnecessarily cruel, aftermath of war; nor is there any need to tell you how our heart, the heart of the common Father of all, bleeds with anguish for His children who turn appealing eyes towards Him in hope that He will save them from their hopelessness. But we would tell you how consoled and grateful we are for the bounteous and never failing assistance you have given us for our crusade of world-wide charity. Your sacrifices make that charity possible.

As a pledge of God's eternal reward and as a token of our affectionate and abiding gratitude we impart to all the faithful, to the religious, clergy and sacred hierarchy of the United States the apostolic benediction.

Churchgoers of Capital Urged To 'Give Thanks by Giving'

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

"Give thanks by giving" was the keynote of "Thanskgiving Sunday" services in Greater Washington churches yesterday.

The Thanksgiving Food Collection of War Relief Services, National Catholic Welfare Conference, began throughout the country, extending to November 30. Thanksgiving-themed sermons, musicales and plays dominated Protestant services.

Priests made eloquent sermon appeals for support of the food drive, in which more than 100 archdioceses, 15,000 parishes, 425,000 volunteers and two million school children are participating.

The Rev. E. Jerome Winter, pastor of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, 25th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., reminded his parishioners of the bounty most Americans will enjoy Thanksgiving Day while brethren overseas starve.

"It is sad enough to see an adult hungry, but its sadder still to think of little children begging parents for bread," said Father Winter, chairman of the food drive for Washington and Baltimore archdioceses. "It is not a question of whether we won the war and they lost it. It is a maater of Christian charity to help all who are in need abroad."

Parishioners delivered canned goods or money at rectory doors yesterday and will do likewise the rest of this week.

Meanwhile, contributions of food, clothing and money for the needy at home and abroad will be received at many Protestant services Wednesday night and Thursday. Worshipers attending Georgetown neighborhood services Thursday at 10:30 a. m. at Christ Episcopal Church, 31st and O sts. nw., are asked to bring warm clothing to be sent abroad.

Canned Goods Donated

The offering received at a service Thursday at 11 a. m. at Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw., will aid the Methodist Home for the Aged. Churches of the West Washington District participating in a booth festival Saturday night at Hamline Church brought canned goods for relief. The Youth Fellowship of Emory Methodist Church, Brightwood, received a plaque for the booth which judges deemed to best express the theme of "Give of Your Best."

Meanwhile the Church World Service Center at New Windsor, Md., Eastern depot for Protestant churches' relief to Europe, last night reported that 3,413,807 pounds of relief goods was received for shipment overseas from January 1 to November 1, 1947. A shipment of 1010 pounds of bedding and clothing was recently received by the center from New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here.

Thanksgiving Service

A number of services have been planned for Thanksgiving Day and Thanksgiving Eve—Wednesday.

Catholic highlights will be the annual Pan-American mass Thursday at 10:30 a. m., at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw., where diplomats of South America, the United States and other lands will worship.

Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen of Catholic University, will preach at the mass. The Most. Rev. John M. McNamara, administrator of the Washington and Baltimore Archdioceses, will preside, and the Most Rev Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will pontificate.

Among the neighborhood services scheduled for Protestant churches on Thanksgiving Day are the following:

11 a. m.—Adas Israel Synagogue, 6th an I sts. nw., service for the Jewish community; 10 a. m., Chevy Chase Baptist Church, Western ave. near Chevy Chase Circle, service of the area's churches; 11 a. m., Universalist National Memorial Church, 16th and S sts. nw., services of several 16th st., Mount Pleasant and Cleveland Park congregations; 11 a. m., National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, downtown churches join in services; 10:30 a. m., Our Saviour Episcopal Church, 16th and Irving sts. ne., services for Brookland-Woodridge area, and 8 a. m., Clarendon (Va.) Baptist Church, services for churches of the community.

Petworth congregations will hold a joint "thanks" service Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, New Hampshire ave. and Randolph sts. nw., Southeast churches' union rites are set for Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Trinity Methodist Church, 5th st. and Seward Square se.

Services will be held Thanksgiving Day at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral. There will be also be communion at 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m., and evensong at 4 p. m.

Nanking Puts Chinese Vote At 20 Million

Nanking, Nov. 23 (AP).—Pro-government sources declared today that 20 million Chinese men and women—one-tenth of those eligible—voted in China's first national election, but neutral observers doubted whether the total reached 10 million.

Votes were cast for 3044 national assemblymen who, on December 25, will elect China's first constitutional President.

The voting largely was decided in advance with an arrangement by which the dominant Kuomintang, Chiang Kai-shek's party, promised to give a few assembly seats to the only parties in the field against it—the minority Young China and Democratic Socialist Parties.

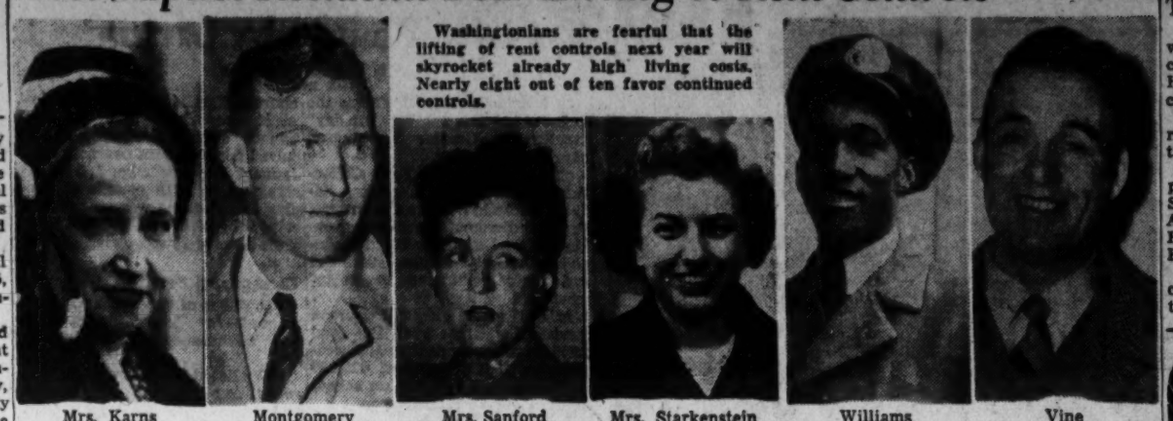
President Chiang, who is expected to keep on being President, voted in Nanking today, the last day of the three-day election.

Inept handling characterized the operation of most voting places in Nanking and elsewhere. Chinese generally are unfamiliar with voting procedure.

Observers reported numerous violations of the election laws.

Most Capitol Residents Fear Lifting of Rent Controls

Washingtonians are fearful that the lifting of rent controls next year will skyrocket already high living costs. Nearly eight out of ten favor continued controls.



Mrs. Karns | Montgomery | Mrs. Sanford | Mrs. Starkenstein | Williams | Vine

Mrs. Nettie Karns, "about 50," owner of Nettie's Beauty Salon, 1329 E st. nw., who often hears as many as 100 women a day discuss their respective housing problems, considers herself an authority in this field.

"Rents now are way out of proportion to other prices, and therefore controls should be kept so they won't go any higher," she declared. "Although my husband and I own a home at 5220 N. Washington blvd., Arlington, Va., and have no rent problems at the present time, I feel this very strongly. It is the overwhelming view of my customers, too," she added.

Mrs. Karns' opinion that in special hardship cases small increases in rent should be allowed, if controls are continued, was in line with the over-all finding of the poll. It

"Rents in Washington and suburbs are already three or four times those of my native Mississippi. Remove all controls, and they'll be out of sight," C. M. Montgomery, 26, of 435 N. Columbus st., Alexandria, Va., warned yesterday.

Montgomery, a counter salesman in the Rosslyn, Va., store of Noland Co., Inc., electrical wholesale concern, pays $16 a week for two roms, porch and a shared bathroom for his wife, child and himself. The recent 15 per cent authorized raise hit him just before he moved in four months ago, he said.

He still wants what he called "give and take" betwen laendlords and occupants after retention of controls in March. "But first, in order to get raises landlords must prove definite hardship," he added.

"Eliminate controls and we'll have the problem of profiteering landlords on our hands," Mrs. Grace Sanford, 42, recent arrival from Alaska, told The Washington Post yesterday.

Mrs. Sanford, who served at Juneau on the OPA Board of Supervisors for southeastern Alaska, had an opportunity to see the "disparity" in rents between western Alaska, which were far above the District level, and the lower rates of the Juneau area to the southeast. "Effective rent control could cure that," she said.

Mrs. Sanford, and her husband, Robert S. Sanford, mining engineer in the United States Bureau of Mines now stationed at its College Park, Md., station, have been living in an apartment at 3130 Rittenhouse st. nw. since their arrival November 10. Rents here

"Take rent controls off in March, and prices will go so high it will be impossible to live," Mrs. Linda Starkenstein, 26, 744 8th st. nw., declared yesterday.

"My husband, who is in the automatic machine merchandising business, and I have traveled widely in this country in the past five years. We both agree that rent conditions here are worse than in any place we have visited," she said.

Mrs. Starkenstein thinks no landlords should be granted rent boosts if controls are continued after March. Their own landlord, she points out, has never paid for repairs since she and her husband rented the place five years ago.

"Rent controls should be retained to prevent prices from skyrocketing into the stratosphere," Charles R. Williams, 30, of the Carrolsburg Housing Project, 413 Eye st. se., said yesterday.

"My rent increase from $37.50 to $50 in September threw me behind the eight-ball, and now my savings are going fast," he exclaimed. "The Government up to now has set rents in its projects in accordance with wage scales. I sure hope they don't have to raise them again—for I'm going broke fast," Williams added.

Williams, a veteran and now a carrier for the City Postoffice, has lived in Carrolsburg since 1941. His $50 pays for two rooms, a kitchen and a bath for himself, wife and child.

Richard Vine, the Innkeeper in "Song of Norway" which played last week at the National Theater here, and a steady hotel patron across the continent since the show opened in Los Angeles in April, echoed similar sentiments for the hotel field.

"Take off controls, and up go prices," he maintained. One reason: "Not one hotel in some 20 cities we have played went begging for business. They've got more than they can handle, and so can afford to raise rates."

Vine, 32, an aviation engineer in Los Angeles before entering show business, said that hotel prices before the war were only about half as high as those today. Rates today take a big bite out of his pay and only the stars can afford to stay at the more expensive hotels, he said.

Persons interviewed by The Washington Post were assured their names and addresses would not be divulged. Opinions expressed here were obtained in spot interviews by reporters in the downtown area.

77% of District Residents Favor Keeping Lid on Rents

organized to resist, or because the case is still pending.

These findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of adults in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Questions and Answers

Local residents were asked:

"Are you in favor of continuing rent controls beyond next March, or do you think they should be dropped?"

Here are the answers:

	All Groups	Home Owners	Renters
Favor continuing rent controls	77%	84%	86%
Favor under some conditions	4	6	2
Favor dropping them	12	17	9
Undecided	7	13	3

Renters are naturally somewhat more in favor of continuing rent controls, but a majority of home owners, too, support this program.

Post Pollers then asked:

"What do you think will happen after next March, if rent controls go off?"

Replies were divided as follows:

Rents will go up a great deal	55%
They will go up moderately	29
Other predictions	6
Don't know what will happen	10

Effect of Decontrol

In addition to the predictions about what rents would do, one of four stated that people would suffer hardships because of inability to afford decent housing if rent controls were lifted. Some stated that lifting rent controls would have widespread effects on our economy, would produce depression, recession, or serious inflation spiral, and a smaller group felt our general standard of living would be lowered as a result. A few said the Government would eventually be forced to reinstate controls.

To the question:

"If rent controls are continued, do you think that rents should be allowed to go up some, or should they be kept the same?"

Washingtontonians answered:

Rents should be allowed to go up some	22%
Increases should be granted in some cases	33
Rents should ge kept the same	33
Rents should be lowered	3
Undecided	9

Majority Vociferous

Asked about their own rents, 19 per cent stated they felt some increase would be fair, but 70 per cent shouted a hearty "No." Eleven per cent were undecided.

Renters were asked:

"Has your rent been raised in the last year?"

Replies indicated that 15 per cent had had their rent boosted. Five per cent reported that landlords had tried to raise the rent but had not yet succeeded. For the remaining 80 per cent the rent front was still calm.

One tenant reported that his rent had been raised from $36 to $62.50 a month. The tenants in the project have organized and are attempting to appeal the increase. In other apartment houses, tenant organization has been effective in preventing the signing of leases which provide for higher rents.

Taft As Policy-Maker

At a conference meeting of Republican Senators some of Senator Taft's colleagues are reported to have criticized severely his Monday night attack on the President's anti-inflation program. The burden of their complaint is that he failed to make clear that he was expressing his personal opinions and not laying down a program for the party to follow. We think the objection well taken, for we do not doubt that the great majority of the audience that tuned in to listen to the Senator assumed that he was addressing them not as a candidate for the presidency but as a leader of the majority party expounding the principles that would govern the actions of that majority.

Of course, that was not true, as the Senate Policy Committee of which Mr. Taft is chairman had had no opportunity to ascertain the views of the Republican members of the Senate or to reach decisions in regard to legislative programs. Nevertheless, Mr. Taft created the impression that most of the President's recommendations for curbing inflation will meet with a hostile reception from his Republican colleagues. We suspect that he has unconsciously come to regard himself as a dictator of party policy empowered to tell others what to think and how to act.

In the present instance, Mr. Taft's personal views happen to conflict with those of a number of Republicans who consider it bad economic policy and poor political strategy to take a purely negative stand on the important issues of price and rationing control. In our opinion, Mr. Taft has not furthered his own political fortunes by his precipitancy. That, of course, is his responsibility. It was, however, equivalent to a usurpation of authority for him to speak as if his views reflected the wishes of his party. By doing so he invited the rebukes that, according to report, introduced discord into the Republican Conference.

The Unstable Franc

The lesson that a non-Communist government cannot operate in France without General de Gaulle's permission was learned with the choice of Robert Schuman, M. R. P. leader, to form a government after Leon Blum had failed to win a vote of confidence in the Assembly. M. Schuman could not possibly have won his vote of confidence without General de Gaulle's support. The price of this support will doubtless be revealed as time goes on. Meanwhile the fiscal crisis in France as well as the restoration of public order calls for the immediate attention of the new government.

What has been done hitherto to cope with France's economic troubles has been worse than useless. Official price fixing has failed lamentably. In fact, it has created new problems for the harassed French government. For example, the government set too low a price for wheat, with the result that the wheat acreage was greatly reduced last year and farmers were encouraged to feed such wheat as was grown to cattle, and the meat was then sold in the black market. Ineffective administration of price regulations has also resulted in the spread of those markets. Consequently, living costs have continued to mount and workers subject to wage stabilization laws are being squeezed unmercifully by the rise in living costs, unless they manage to find employment in trades and occupations where regulations can be evaded. The net result is that production of essential articles is held back and workers use their leisure and their money, too, shopping for black market foods with which to supplement their meager rations.

All these disorders and economic dislocations trace back to lack of confidence in the unstable and heavily depreciated franc. That situation can only be remedied by a government that has the courage to insist upon really effective financial reforms, as well as the political strength to survive the uproar that inevitably follows such reforms, as Camille Gutt discovered in Belgium.

The importance of stabilizing the currencies of nations expected to participate in the Marshall Plan has been stressed by the Harriman Committee. For, as it notes, monetary stabilization is prerequisite to a "gradual restoration of normal incentives and a gradual return to a system where individuals and enterprises, both public and private, can operate in markets." Moreover, so long as inflation remains unchecked, the stabilization of exchange rates is virtually impossible, and the problem presented by a lack of balance in external accounts is all but insoluble. In other words, if France is to achieve lasting and substantial benefit from aid furnished under the Marshall Plan, she must reform her disordered currency system and put an end to deficit financing. If that can be done, we believe a formidable weapon will have been fashioned against the Communist-inspired disturbances which appear to have brought France to the brink of civil war.

M. Schuman has the advantage of close acquaintance with the problem, having served for a year and a half as Minister of Finance. The real question is whether his competence in this field can be united to the kind of energetic and forward-looking leadership that France needs in this hour of crisis.

Home Rule Changes

The Auchincloss Subcommitte is demonstrating commendable flexibility in working out its plan for home rule in the District. Its first report was not put out on a take-it-or-leave-it basis, and now it has made a number of improvements in its original tentative recommendations in response to public discussion. This is admirable procedure. We think, moreover, that most of the changes made in the Auchincloss plan are in the interest of good local government.

Certainly there would be no reason for congressional review of the District budget once an elected council were on the job. Indeed, we interpreted the original suggestion for reference of the District budget to the proposed joint District Committee as merely a means of giving Congress routine information as to proposed District expenditures. It is much better, however, to have the local budget passed by the council and go into effect promptly without any review by Congress, unless the watchdogs in that body should feel that it is imperative to correct some grave mistake on the part of the local authorities. In that event, of course, a special act could be passed by Congress. In the absence of such abuse of power on the part of the local government, we think Congress should exercise no control over the local budget, except to appropriate each year the contribution to the District called for by the new Auchincloss formula.

Nor is there any occasion for routine congressional review of local ordinances passed by the council. Many such ordinances are now passed by the appointed Commissioners without congressional check. It would be a grave step backward to require any congressional body to mull over this local business, but the joint committee on the District should be in a position to probe into the adoption of any such ordinance on its own initiative. We think it is also a good idea to reduce from 60 to 30 days the period during which a proposed legislative measure passed by the council, as distinguished from a mere ordinance, would have to lie before Congress before becoming effective. It is quite proper, in our opinion, to give the President as well as Congress a chance to veto such acts. As a practical matter, we do not like to see the plan weakened to the extent of giving each house of Congress a veto power over "laws" to be passed for the District by the council, as the subcommittee now suggests. But the plan will doubtless be strengthened constitutionally if either branch of the Congress is permitted to nullify this proposed delegation of power whenever any exercise of that power meets with disapproval of a majority of its members. In any event, the most important consideration is the granting to an elected council of the strictly municipal powers, with no other strings attached than the general power of Congress to correct abuses.

In The Record

Among the corollary blessings brought by the reassembling of the Eightieth Congress in continuation of its first session is the reappearance with the morning mail of that indispensable daily, the Congressional Record. Where else than in the invaluable appendix to this publication could we have learned of the restraint and delicacy with which politics is practiced in the sovereign State of Louisiana? Consider, for example, simply from a literary point of view, the opinion—the rather low opinion—of Senator John H. Overton expressed by Representative James H. Morrison and set forth under the caption, Morrison Answers Overton: "John H. Overton, a senile and doddering old man, who has on several occasions vented his spleen on me because I have dared to help people of this State who live in his district, and who appealed to him first for help and got nothing, dragged his senatorial toga in the slime of falsehood on Monday night."

In Mississippi, on the other hand, a higher standard of gallantry prevails. The very first business of the reconvening Senate was to hear some appraisals of the late Senator Bilbo by his whilom colleagues. Their sense of loss was as naught, however, to that expressed in the House by such mourners as Representative John Rankin, who said, a trifle enigmatically, perhaps, "No man who has ever served in that great body (the United States Senate) suffered the unjust treatment that was meted out to this humble representative of the toiling masses of Mississippi. Whatever else might be said of Theodore G. Bilbo, he never lost the common touch. His heart went out to the toiling people of his State, and whenever their interest was at stake they knew exactly where he stood."

The first days of the reunited Congress were lamentably crowded with necrologies. There was time, however, for an occasional foray into foreign affairs. Representative Ramey of Ohio, for instance, uttered some thoughtful views anent England's royal wedding. "We have heard over the radio and in the press," he told the House, "about the English noblewoman who received over two million dollars worth of jewels as a wedding gift. That is happening while they send out appeals to us to send them a great many things, which we have been willing to do and have done. I wonder—I wonder about these appeals when the nobility there have jewels and great riches, while little girls and boys in this country are going to do without their Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners in order to send things to them voluntarily . . . Yes, the United States of America pays and pays and pays while the royalty of the Old World plays and plays and plays. Royalty of the Old World, why will you not give up your vanity, your pleasure, and only give to your own who need, as we give of our own to you?" Let 'em eat diamonds, appears to be Mr. Ramey's view.

Some day, some enterprising publisher is going to issue an anthology of the best of the Congressional Record. And no doubt it will outstrip Forever Amber in sales and popularity. The movie rights alone might make tax reduction feasible. But for ourselves, we shall continue eagerly to look each day for the Record itself—and for the gems hidden and unheralded in its deceptively desiccated pages.

Senator Barkley At 70

As Senator Alben W. Barkley today reaches the favored milestone of three score years and 10, he will doubtless be the recipient of congratulations from many sources. The Senator has played an energetic role in national affairs ever since his election to Congress 35 years ago, and during the 10 years that he was majority leader of the Senate he was constantly on the firing line. Much less has been heard from him since Republican control of the Senate relegated him to the minority leadership last January, but even in these quieter days he remains an influential figure.

Mr. Barkley was not an especially outstanding legislator when President Roosevelt selected him to step into the breach created by the sudden death of Senator Joseph T. Robinson in the midst of the fight over reorganization of the Supreme Court in 1937. It was generally supposed that what counted most in his favor was his reputation as a party wheelhorse. Over the subsequent years Mr. Barkley has served more as a White House spokesman than as the leader of the Democrats in the Senate. But there have been times when he has been pushed too far and has risen in wrath against executive dictation, as when he resigned the majority leadership because of President Roosevelt's ultra-sharp veto of a tax bill in 1944. This show of independence won new respect for Mr. Barkley and notably enhanced his influence in the Senate. Senators also came to appreciate his untiring zeal and patience in promoting legislation. Throughout the war years he carried crushing burdens of responsibility without even complaining or losing his sense of humor.

The Senator's inclination to play the game of politics has led him into some serious errors, such as his indorsement of Congressman May for reelection last year after a Senate Committee had partly exposed the May-Garsson scandal. But his service to his country on the positive side has been extensive and merits warm commendation. There will be much satisfaction, too, that, while he is far "past the bounds of freakish youth," he is nevertheless "strong for service still, and unimpaired."

Regional Planning

The four nearby Virginia governing bodies which are now considering a regional planning commission are to be congratulated on their awareness of the need for a comprehensive approach to mutual problems. There has, of course, been some measure of regional planning in the past. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which operates with broad authority in metropolitan Washington, works closely in an advisory capacity with Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties in Maryland and has had the cooperation of Virginia communities. Such cooperation has been made necessary by the expansion of Government buildings beyond the borders of the District. One result of these mutual efforts may be seen in the highway entrances to the Capital.

There remain numerous problems of common interest. Foremost among these is the pollution of the Potomac, which is aggravated by the fact that many Virginia communities lack sewage treatment facilities and dump raw sewage into the river. Some sort of inter-county agreement could aid materially in remedying this situation. We think it encouraging, therefore, that Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties and the City of Alexandria have been asked to appoint members of a committee to draw up plans for a regional organization. This organization then will be charged with preparing a master plan for the area, subject, of course, to ratification by the individual localities. A regional commission can be of great value in facilitating the tackling of Washington area problems as a unit through close integration of its activities with the NCPPC.

WILD AZALEA

In a wedge, as birds flying, they crossed the field.
A cool shock of green darkness rushed to meet the children behind the Bulldog Rock.
"I'm afraid!" said Philip. "Shivers creep along my bone!
The trees have monkey faces and long fingers . . ."

Take my hand, said Joan.

Ellen found a thrush lying stiff as brown stone.
"O why? O how? O who?" Ellen cried.

Let's bury the bird, said Joan.
"I'm afraid!" said Philip. "The bird," cried Ellen, "was hardly grown."

Azaleas bloom on the slope where trees are thinner.
Come along, said Joan.

"Someone crushed the spring beauties and all but three are dead . . ."
"I like the yellow tulips in mother's garden!"

Never mind, Joan said.
On branching stems the azaleas will be pink and full-blown:
hold my hand, said Joan.

Air Strength

According to your November 18 news story of his testimony before the President's Air Policy Commission, General Spaatz indicated that the Russians have 14,000 "first-line combat planes," or "more than three times the present U. S. total." It appears the general would like a Regular Air Force of some 6900 planes, plus an Air National Guard of 3200, plus an Air Reserve of 2300, plus a reserve of 8100, apparently in storage. This magnificent assemblage would provide about 7000 USAF combat planes ("first-line?"), and "the Soviet air force still would be twice as strong numerically as ours."

What confuses me is that either The Washington Post or General Spaatz, in comparing United States air strength, present and proposed, with Russian air strength, is counting only United States Air Force planes.

Perhaps you could advise your readers whether Navy and Marine Corps aviation have already been abolished, or merged into the Air Force, or whether you (or the general) consider them not a useful part of United States combat air strength. If the latter is the case, you (or the general) should be frank enough to say so. This would seem preferable to the continual, and one might even say studied omission to any reference to naval aviation as a part of "United States air strength," or "United States air power," in press material coming from United States Air Force sources.

The Washington Post and the Air Force were both strong, almost violent advocates of unification. If naval aviation still exists, is not yet a part of the Air Force, and still has some combat usefulness, one might expect The Washington Post (and General Spaatz), in accordance with the spirit of unification, to include Navy planes in any count of "total United States air strength," particularly for comparison with the total strength of another nation. For was not unification intended to promote just such unified thinking?

Or is the spirit of unification, like the spirit of military honesty in general, binding only on naval aviators? PUZZLED CIVILIAN.

Cure For Inflation

Inflation is brought about in two ways. Goods appreciate in value either because of their scarcity, or because the money in which they are valued becomes too plentiful. Sometimes both factors are working at once. This seems to be the case today. Yet in looking for remedies, little attention has been given to the increased volume of money. Only the scarcity of goods is emphasized.

Both the volume of money in circulation and the rate at which it circulates tend to inflate prices. If money is created faster than goods, it loses its value in terms of goods. If the volume of goods we are producing today is no greater than it was before the war, then the fact that the supply of money is many times greater than before the war, is the real cause of inflation. Only by bringing the volume of money in circulation into closer relationship with the volume of goods we can produce, can we prevent a further spiraling of prices and wages.

Bank money is created today by the Federal Reserve Banks issuing promises to pay (currency) on promises to pay (securities). It is like the two men on the desert island getting rich by swapping shells over a crate of apples. They have no more apples than they had before, but each has an ever mounting pile of shells that, in their imagination, means more apples. Befor our money becomes entirely meaningless, let's bring it into a more sane relationship with our goods. Let's ration money.

What should be done today is exactly the opposite of what was done during the depression. Instead of paying people to rake leaves, let's pay them to produce goods. Instead of paying them not to produce let's put a premium on production. We have great productive capacity created during the war. Remit taxes on those who use this capacity to produce more goods. Increase taxes on those whose incomes are from non-productive sources. Drive money into production through taxation. Take money out of circulation by boosting the sale of long term Government bonds, with interest rates increasing the longer they are held.

Make the power to tax, the power to produce. REALIST.
Washington.

Officers' Reputations

The decidedly "Andy May" turn in the testimony currently being given before the Senate War Investigating Committee is, in its implications, most disturbing.

It is disturbing enough to see the pattern repeated—unsubstantial and unsubstantiated statements, chest-thumping, and the same verbal shadow-boxing that tells too familiar a story.

More disturbing, however, is the instinctive, although in a sense understandable, "clamming up" and side-stepping by responsible officers. By doing so they are tacitly condoning what has every appearance of being highly irregular conduct, and they sow the thought in the minds of the public that possibly they too may have a bit of tar from the same brush.

A high officer, like Caesar's wife, must be above reproach. If one fails, the integrity of every other officer is suspect unless they demonstrate the basic integrity of the service by neither evading nor avoiding their responsibilities in instances such as this.

Scientific Food Production

The official thinking of our Department of Agriculture seems to be largely motivated by the bugaboo of overproduction and concern for the farmers' income rather than the needs of humanity. Presently, it has its experts working on plans for an expensive diet to maintain the high level of agricultural income and employment by subsidizing the low income consumers to eat such.

If we would be scientific instead of political in our fight against world food shortages and the high cost of living, we would enact some such program as follows in order of priority:

1. Make an immediate grant of 60 or 70 million dollars to church and other philanthropic agencies now operating child-feeding operations on shoestring budgets in various European distressed areas. An experienced administrative staff without political implications thus would be obtained. The United Nations committee headed by Mr. Chester Bowles is due to start a fund-raising campaign on March 1 for a similar child-feeding organization with operations throughout the world. Once such an organization is fully operative, the facilities acquired under this program would be turned over to them. The use of the soybean in this program would greatly increase its production and use here and abroad.

2. To insure an adequate supply of soybeans prior to the next regular harvest, investigate the feasibility of inducing farmers to plant a winter crop in our semitropical areas, in lieu of luxury vegetables having little nutritional values. The interstitial areas of citrus groves might well be planted. U. N. might obtain a considerable amount of soybeans for its program by distributing, next spring, via schools, churches, etc., packets of soybean seed with printed culture instructions to volunteers for planting in their vegetable and flower gardens.

3. Pass the pending bill for establishment of a department of health and welfare that will be as solicitous of our people's health, nutrition and consumers' outgo as the Department of Agriculture is of our animals' welfare and farmers' income.

4. Repeal the discriminatory margarine laws as a means of lowering the prices of fluid milk needed by children. Margarine in its present fortified form is as nutritious as butter. A larger use of it instead of butter would force all milk-product prices downward.

5. Lend-lease some of our laid-up military transports to expedite movement of surplus population from Britain and Italy to underpopulated areas desiring them. Britain has a backlog of 1,500,000 on its shipping lists. Italy has more than four million excess population, much of which could be absorbed in South America were shipping available. This transport passage would not be a luxurious type of passage but would be at least as good as the steerage passages that carried many of the forebears of our own citizens.

6. Adjust the parity price formulas so that they take into account the vast amount of labor reduction since the 1909-1914 base, due to mechanization, better seed, animal strains, fertilizers, etc.

The $1000 1910 automobile could be produced in today's mechanized plants for about $600 despite the great increases in capital, labor per hour, and material costs. Were the automobile manufacturer protected by the present farmers' parity program he could force the Government to pay him $2160 for this automobile.

While the factors of mechanization, better seeds and animals vary from product to product, and farm to farm, this example is not too far-fetched on many of our staple farm products. The lowering of the parity price supports of such products as eggs, poultry, potatoes, etc., now being supported would not only decrease the price of those products directly. A consumer shift to these products because of their cheapness would also automatically lower price levels of scarce products now far above their parity prices.

7. As a long-range conservation, antistream pollution measure, and public works primer for depression eras, no-interest Federal loans should be provided to cities for use in building sewage-disposal plants that extract a large part of the soil nutrients now being irretrievably lost at sea. Such loans would be repaid by the sale of the high-grade, sterilized fertilizer obtained from the process. This would extend, by many years, the life expectancy of our farm lands.

Such a rational, scientific program would go far toward solving many of the present domestic and world problems, would promote peace and would alleviate inflationary tendencies. The only thing which stands in its way is lack of the strong leadership required to put over such a program in the face of political opposition. J. B.

In Worse Case Of Woe

THE MEANING OF TREASON, by Rebecca West. (Viking Press, $3.50.)

This book, which deals with the series of trials for treason conducted last year in England, contains the finest examples of reporter's work that I have ever seen. Some of them, as you may remember, appeared in the New Yorker while the cases were still current and are thus fully admissible to the category of journalism. But they belong also to literature, if we accept Mr. Cyril Connolly's definition of literature as the sort of writing that seems better when it is read a second time. Miss West was able to bring to the work, besides a sharp observation and a sharper intelligence, the novelist's passion for character and motive, and could exploit these gifts in a sensitive and modulated prose. She could give her stories simultaneous planes of interest, as, for example, historical record, descriptive detail, psychological analysis and an austere but compassionate moral criticism. Miss West, to be sure, had also certain arbitrary advantages rarely allowed to newspaper reporters; she was apparently not restricted in the length and form of her articles, and she had time to find the right words for what she wanted to say. When Miss West has been obliged to compete on even terms with the professionals, and without special favor from the clock, the result has been much less impressive, as, for example, in her report of the recent wedding of Princess Elizabeth, written for an American newspaper syndicate. But then, as somebody—I think Mr. Christopher Morley—observed, "a deadline is a point at which something perishes," and what perished in Miss West's case was the quality of philosophic reflection which gives to her work its distinction.

All the same, in these reports of the English treason trials, and again in her report of the lynching trial at Greenville, S. C., Miss West set a new standard in journalism. It is one of paradoxes of the trade that such improvements rarely originate among the daily newspapers, but are often imitated by them after they have appeared elsewhere. I dare say the explanation is that newspaper editors and publishers are the most conventional and conservative of men with an almost Confucian devotion to the practices of their predecessors; as far as I can determine the most recent radical alterations in newspaper techniques, for better or worse, occurred in the heyday of the Messrs. Pulitzer and Hearst. Even such timid typographic innovations as the use of sans-serif type in headlines or the use of margins instead of rules between columns were not adopted until long after the one had been made commonplace by advertisers and the other by the magazines. Thus while it is safe enough to say that reporters of Miss West's quality are not to be found everywhere, it is by no means safe to say that an unknown writer of comparable judgment and talent could find an editor willing to grant the freedom for its effective exercise.

To Miss West the news, as such, is of merely minor concern. She does indeed narrate everything of importance that transpired in connection with the trials, reconstructs skillfully the atmosphere of the courts and elucidates admirably the points of law involved. But her main concern with the evidence is to discover in it the spiritual and material influences that impelled these men along the fatal road of treason, though she is well aware of course that the definition of treason lies with the victors and of the chances that might have placed a wholly different set of prisoners in the dock. The most difficult and interesting of her characters is William Joyce, or Lord Haw-Haw, in whom she perceives a model of the revolutionary adventurer. She is not without a certain respect and even sympathy for him, deeming him a Fascist of considerably larger talents than the living Oswald Mosley, or than the psychopathic John Amery, who followed Joyce to the gallows. Joyce belonged to an Irish family which, although Catholic, had allied itself both emotionally and practically with the Dublin Castle regime. There seems some reason to suspect that his father had been a volunteer secret agent of the Royal Irish Constabulary. "It is the weakness of imperialism," observes Miss West, "that in a country occupied by strange power no man can know the sweetness of conformity, can marry his will to the common will for happy ends. If he be at one with his fellow countrymen he must be a rebel against the conquerors; if he be at one with the conquerors he must rebel against his fellow countrymen."

After the triumph of Irish nationalism the Joyces were compelled to emigrate to England where the reward of their loyalty was that they remained aliens and misfits. Thus Miss West is able to find reasons though indeed no excuses for William Joyce's treachery. There were, it seems, many legalistically-minded English, who, when it was all over, felt that Joyce, while a despicable man, had been unjustly hanged, for though he had concealed and even lied about it, it was established that he had been born in the United States, and what an alien may do in an alien country is no rightful concern of British justice. Miss West, however, is of an inverse opinion; that Joyce, while justly and properly hanged, was not entirely despicable, less so indeed than "the fatuous and gifted" Dr. Allan Nunn May, who tried to give the secret of the atom bomb to his fellow Communists in Russia.

Today And Tomorrow

High Stakes At London

Lippmann

AS THE Foreign Ministers meet in London, the chances of agreement are obviously poor. The stakes are, nevertheless, high. For the worse the prospects of four-power agreement at this conference, the more important it is to make every effort to see to it that on the issues which cause the disagreement we have taken and are able to hold positions that are favorable for the future. We must not let the failure of the conference—which some among us look forward to with impatience and morbid satisfaction—mean also a diplomatic failure for the United States.

For if this conference must fail to reach, or even to come close to agreement on, a German and an Austrian treaty, it will still be of the highest consequence whether Mr. Marshall or Mr. Molotov has had the diplomatic initiative, has identified himself with proposals that express the needs and aspirations of Europe as a whole, is the sponsor of the restoration of the European community and not of its permanent division, has taken positions which signify the will to persist until peace is at long last achieved. It is quite reckless and irresponsible to think that it would be vain and time-wasting for Mr. Marshall to make every conceivable effort to demonstrate our desire for agreement, our interest in a constructive settlement for Europe, our willingness to compromise on secondary matters, our determination to persist, no matter how long it takes, in the search for a settlement and peace. For if the conference must fail, Mr. Marshall must try to emerge from it, having secured for this country, as against Russia, a position of greater influence in the troubled days that lie ahead.

THE IMPATIENT people who foresee failure, and want it as quickly as possible, are acting as if they know how to solve the German problem in western Germany and to rehabilitate western Europe under the Marshall Plan by making deeper and more permanent the division between east and west. They are most fearfully mistaken. The financial costs and the economic and political difficulties will be enormous if, after a failure at London, we commit ourselves to guaranteeing the political and economic future of a western German government.

Before we do anything of that sort, there ought to be a searching re-examination of the estimates on which are based the conclusion that the western zones can become self-supporting and can play the role assigned to them in the Marshall Plan. The calculations on which they rest have not, I think, been published. It would be useful if they were published so that Congress and qualified students of the subject could see how wishful is the thinking on which is based the fashionable conclusion that western Germany can be made approximately self-supporting by 1952, especially if relations with eastern Germany and eastern Europe deteriorate still more.

THE ESTIMATES call for raising the exports of the British-American zone from 277 million dollars this year to over two billions by 1952. In other words, the exports of the two zones are to be multiplied more than seven times in five years. On the other hand, imports, which are now running at 1.5 billions a year, are to rise only to 2.3 billions, or only about half. Maybe this can be done. But it is certainly a big order—to expect this region, which is deficient in food and raw materials, to receive only a small increase of imports while it produces a gigantic increase of exports.

And when we ask where these exports are to go, we have to fall back on a highly theoretical estimate of what these zones exported and imported before the war—in the year 1936. The estimate is highly theoretical because the statistics for 1936, which officially we regard as a normal year, cover the whole of what was then the German Reich. It takes some tall guessing to figure out the share of the two artificially disconnected zones.

But the figures, for what they are worth, show that in 1936, for the British and American zones, and for our two sectors of Berlin (!), 30 per cent of the commodities exported and imported were to and from eastern Germany and eastern Europe. Thus nearly one third of the trade of this theoretically self-supporting western Germany would have to be with the Russian orbit—even if all comes out as favorably as the theoretical estimates assume.

THIS INDICATES, it seems to me, how rash it would be to conclude that if the London Conference fails to agree, we can proceed happily and successfully to solve the German problem without continuing to negotiate with the tiresome Russians.

For one of the very first things our provisional government of western Germany, which we hear about, would have to do would be to negotiate trade and currency agreements with the Russian zone, with Poland, and with the nations of the Danube valley. If it does not, then it cannot on any calculation now available, even the most optimistic, hope to become self-supporting. And if it is not self-supporting, it will not be able to maintain that stable currency which, all are agreed, is essential to the revival of the German economy.

THE GERMAN problem is an enormously difficult problem. There are no short cuts through it. There are no cheap and easy solutions, born of impatience and the wish to do something whether or not it can passibly work, which look dramatic and decisive.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

A Lecture By Marshal Sokolovsky

BERLIN, NOV. 23.—The most significant single episode in recent months here in Berlin was a lecture delivered by Marshal Sokolovsky to his German economic and production experts. The marshal unburdened his sorely tried spirt behind closed doors, at the Soviet headquarters at Karlshorst. By now, however, the substance of what he said is accurately and reliably known in the headquarters of the Western powers. His words are worth weighing carefully.

The scene itself must be imagined—the Karlshorst conference chamber, heavily guarded by Red army soldiers; the serried ranks of German economists and engineers, most of them able men and all of them terrified; the bemedalled marshal, marching in with his staff, and brusquely calling the meeting to attention. There is no imagination, however, in the following report of what he said.

WITH ALL the terrible authority of the Kremlin's commander in Germany, Sokolovsky began with a threat. If considerable increases in industrial production were not shortly achieved in the Soviet zone, it would be necessary to find other work—positions in the uranium mines perhaps—for the responsible German experts. Production deficits were serious, considerably surpassing the margin of error permitted in the Karlshorst planning. Sabotage was also widespread. If it continued it would be necessary to consider removing the entire working forces of whole factories to more suitable employment in the mines. The situation was grave, and had to be reported directly to the Kremlin.

Having thus declared his discontent, Marshal Sokolovsky then went on to remedies. In an order, soon to be issued industrial workers in the Soviet zone would be given generous inducements to higher production. At the same time, observers and inspecting teams would be established in economic administrations and factory offices, to discover instances of inefficiency, slackness or incorrect political orientation. These spies would be directly responsible to Soviet headquarters. All offenses reported by them would be punished with the utmost severity. No excuses for failure would be accepted, since the honor of the Soviet zone demanded that its industry should not fall behind the zones of the west.

Finally, the marshal turned to the moral and mental improvement of the Germans assembled before him. To assist them in their task, he said, they must acquaint themselves with Soviet history and the successes of the Soviet nation. For this purpose, Colonel Tulpanov, chief political officer of Soviet headquarters, would deliver a weekly seminar. Attendance records at these seminars would, of course, be kept.

ATTEMPTS to increase production by political seminars by Colonel Tulpanov may seem a trifle comic. Nonetheless, there was and is a grave economic reality behind Marshal Sokolovsky's curious harangue. The Soviet zone has been living on its economic fat from the end of the war to the present—operating factory machines at full speed without repair or replacement, using up stocks of all raw materials without finding sources of replenishment, and sending to the Soviet Union an unbearably high proportion of its output, both agricultural and industrial. Now the time of reckoning has come.

It is impossible to synthetize a general picture from the scattered local reports which are available, but one can at least say that all these reports point to the conclusion that the general picture is very bad. In the vital heavy branch at the Krupp Gruson Works, for instance, it was recently discovered that 20 per cent of the raw material was being sold on the black market. At Unterwellenborn, 40 per cent of the iron castings were ruined by an incorrect mix, most probably because high-sulphur-content Russian ores had been used for want of better. At the Rostock shipyards, a huge number of instruments and equipment all ready for installation were destroyed by improper storage. These items are representative.

Nor is the failure of the Soviet zone to produce all that the Kremlin wants the most meaningful aspect of the situation. The pressure for loot from Germany is unremitting. It has led to the adoption of all sorts of extraordinary devices. Buying offices have been established in Berlin to secure silver, gold and jewels at staggering prices, which the Soviets can afford to pay by the simple expedient of printing more reichsmarks. Occupation costs are met by distilling the potato crop into schnapps and selling schnapps to the people. Strange deals are made in the guise of socialization such as the deal by which the government of Land Saxony was forced to accept the heavy deficit of the local copper mines, while the highly profitable copper refineries were bought for Soviet account.

IN THE LARGER SENSE, this presure for loot combined with declining industrial production, means that a larger and larger proportion of total output is taken from the Germans. Thus the inducements to produce grow less and less, despite Marshal Sokolovsky's fine words, while the situation of the individual German in the Soviet zone grows constantly worse and worse.

Again, it is impossible to secure accurate general data, but the immense numbers of non-Nazi Germans sent to Soviet concentration camps are not the only evidence for this conclusion. The leaders of the Soviets' stooge party, the Socialist Unity Party, are given all the special privileges of full-blown commissars. But intelligent reports show that even they are beginning to murmur. The Socialist Unity Party chairman in Land Saxony, Andhalt, is known to have protested bitterly. For example, it was no use, he said, telling his people that the railroad tracks were being torn up and taken to Russia for "strategic reasons." How, he asked, could he win mass support, when reparations were so heavy that each Saxon could hope for only one pair of shoes every 33 years?

All this is important for an obvious reason, even after the division of Germany, the struggle for the German people which was begun by the Soviets, will obviously continue. Some fear that for various reasons, chiefly the location of Berlin in the Soviet zone, eastern Germany will possess the greater magnetism. Surely, however, this is an extraordinarily simplified theory omitting all the more important factors suggested above.

Perfect Story Of 1947

Under the title "Perfect Story of 1947," the Louisville Times in its issue of November 17, printed the following editorial:

If there is no Pulitzer prize which would exactly fit The Washington Post's story of Mrs. Louis Guerrieri a special prize for the perfect real life-romance-in-news should be awarded.

A bare outline does not reveal to the reader the perfection of the story. For purposes of romance Mrs. Guerrieri had to be pretty; as pretty as Cindrella. She met that requirement, photographs by The Post prove. The dress made as a gift for Princess Elizabeth had to be lovely enough for the heir apparent to the world's greatest throne to cherish it. That it was is proved by the fact that the Princess invited the little dressmaker from the North Carolina hills to an afternoon party the day before the wedding!

But that isn't all. And here is where newspaper know-how—say savior faire if you must—comes in. The story The Post published could have been, might have been, a bit on the sloppy side. It wasn't.

Good taste is one of journalism's higher achievements. It deserves its guerdon.

Largest Land Plane, 400-Troop Transport, Flies Hour in Test

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 23 (U.P.)—The world's largest land-based plane, designed to carry 400 soldiers, successfully completed its first test flight today, remaining airborne for one hour.

Test Pilot Russel Rogers, 41, after a slow approach over the city, landed the Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp.'s XC-99 at Lindbergh Field after having lifted the 132-ton plane into the air for its maiden flight.

"It flies better than a B-36," Co-pilot Beryl Erickson said. He was test pilot of the B-36, sister ship of the XC-99. The Army has contracted for 100 B-36s. The XC-99 has a somewhat larger fuselage.

The big plane's takeoff speed was 108 miles an hour into a 14-mile an hour wind, Rogers said, and his top speed in flight was 220 miles. He said he did not push the Behemoth. There were nine crew members in all aboard.

The takeoff was accomplished by using less than half of the 8500-foot runway.

Despite the huge size of the XC-99, it is smaller than Howard Hughes' 25-million-dollar plywood flying boat, the world's largest airplane, which on November 2 briefly flew for the first time in Long Beach (Calif.) Harbor.

Hughes' plane has a wingspread of 320 feet—20 feet longer than a football gridiron—in contrast to the XC-99's 230 feet. The flying boat weighs 200 tons, is built to carry 700 soldiers or 80 tons freight; has a length of 219 feet, and eight engines with a rating of 3000 horsepower each.

The XC-99 has a length of 182½ feet, and its tail towers 57½ feet into the air, equivalent in height to a five-story building. The Army Air Forces, for whom the plane was built, revealed the huge transport will have a maximum range with reduced loads of 8000 miles, a top speed of 300 miles per hour, and a ceiling of 30,000 feet.

B-19, Once U. S. White Hope, Now Only a White Elephant

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

That one-time giant of the skies, Douglas Aircraft's 80-ton B-19 bomber, today rests in a field at Tuscon, Ariz.—the white elephant rather than the white hope of American air power.

Once it was the symbol of United States air strength, the promise of the future. For five years, throughout the war, this jumbo of the air held the undisputed title of the laragest plane in the world. Until the Consolidated-Vultee B-36 bomber, Lockheed's Constitution and Howard Hughes' wooden Hercules came along, it was the biggest thing ever to take wing.

But this was a dubious honor, for the B-19 was recognized as a failure as a bomber during most of the crucial war days. And America then could have used a bomb-carrier with its aimed for 5900 mile range.

Designed in 1935, the plane was years abuilding. It was first flown in California June 27, 1941, and accepted by the Army Air Forces a year later. But during the whole war, the B-19 never left Wright Field, Ohio, efficept for an occasional air show.

The plane's great weakness was that it was under-powered. Engines capable of pushing its bulk along at speeds required during the war just didn't exist at the time. The craft cruised at 140 miles an hour and could make slightly over 200 at top speed.

In 1944 higher-powered engines were installed but they were not enough. The following year the AAF decided to make a cargo plane of the craft but this idea was abandoned.

Like the Hughes plane, the B-19 cost its maker money. Under the 1935 Army contract, the AAF paid Plane-builder Donald Douglas 1½ million dollars when they accepted the craft. But Douglas spent that and another 2½ million of his own building the bomber.

The United States Government—in a day when money was freer—put up 18 million for the Hercules. Hughes says he has spent another $7,200,000 of his own funds on the project and will have to put up $2,500,000 more. Part of this he has offset against income tax.

AAF officials contend they got their money's worth out of the B-19. Many valuable lessons were learned they state, which paid dividends in building the B-29 and B-36. The "19" served as a "flying laboratory" for designing new bombers, it is said.

It always can be contended that an unsuccessful plane teaches valuable lessons. When it is considered what research and development cost today, however, it does appear that the Government got its money out of the B-19.

Is there a parallel between Douglas' elephant and Hughes' mastodon?

Will the Government get any return for the 18 million bucks it put into the Hercules?

Of course, if the latter upsets all the dope, proves a great success, and the Air Force orders the plane in quantity as troop carriers, the United States will profit. But if not, how much of the 18-million-dollar advance will we get in lessons learned?

The Air Forces got its 1½-million-dollar investment back from the B-19—if at all—from five years of experiments with the craft after it had taken it over from the manufacturer.

To date, neither the Air Force, nor the Army or Navy, has shown any interest in taking over the Hughes flying boat to see what can be learned from it. Hughes says all of the data about large aircraft gained by his company is and will be available to the Government.

But if there are lessons to be gained from building a wooden flying boat as high as an office building, will anyone but Hughes' engineers profit by them?

Last year the B-19 was moved to Davis-Monthan Field at Tuscon. Permanently grounded, it is now only a museum-piece. Where will the Hercules be five years hence?

Airborne to Have 16,000 Men

By The Associated Press

The Army disclosed yesterday a decision to build up its only home-based airborne division to the full 16,000-man strength of a standard infantry division.

The announcement by Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of Army Ground Forces, that the Eighty-second will be expanded to 16,000-man strength from original 10,000, disclosed that much of the expansion would be accomplished by adding Negro troops. Devers said that about 17 per cent of total strength would be Negro. (In the past, the proportion of Negro troops for the Army as a whole has been about 10 per cent, roughly the proportion of national Negro population to white population, but a report by a special Army board made about a year ago recommended some changes in this policy.)

Devers' announcement said that the increase in Negro personnel organized in separate units to serve with white units of the eighty-second Division is in line with recommendations of that board. The Negroes will be formed in five combat units, including battalions of infantry, field artillery, anti-aircraft and tank.

Division commander is Maj. Gen. J. M. Gavin, with headquarters at Fort Bragg. One infantry combat regimental team and the major part of a tank battalion will be stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., under the reorganization plan. All other units will be based at Fort Bragg.

New High-Speed Jet Plane Completes Initial Flight Tests

Los Angeles, Nov. 23 (AP).—The U. S. Air Force announced today a new jet-propelled fighter plane designed to probe the sonic speed realm has completed its initial flight tests.

The radically designed plane, the XP-86, was built for the Air Force by North American Aviation and the announcement said it will top 600 miles an hour under actual combat conditions.

The plane features swept back wings and tail assembly, similar to those of the Douglas Skyrocket, with which the Navy proposes to challenge the sonic speed realm.

The Air Force announcement said the XP-86 is the first American fighter in which the sweep-back has been used to delay formation of compressibility shock waves.

The Skyrocket has not been designated as a fighter, but merely as an experimental job.

The Air Force said the swept-back design enables the wings and tail gear to more or less "fit into" the shock-wave pattern.

The plane, with a wing span of 37 feet and an identical over-all length, has a range of more than 1000 miles and a service ceiling above 40,000 feet, the Air Force reported. It is powered by a General Electric axial flow jet engine with a single ram duct producing 4000 pounds of thrust.

The craft was first flown at the Muroc Air Base, where it will undergo exhaustive tests.

FBI White Slave Raid Jails 47 in Ohio

Portsmouth, Ohio, Nov. 23 (AP).—FBI agents swept up 47 prisoners in a sudden smash late last night at what it called farflung white slavery operations centering at Ironton, Ohio.

A "call house district" at Ironton, the FBI declared, has long been the "focal point of prostitution" for communities in three States.

Arrests were made also in Illinois, Missouri and California.

In Washington, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced the arrests were aimed at "interstate transportation of girl recruits for several houses of prostitution within a two-block area" in Ironton, known as "The Line."

He said six men and five women are charged with violation of the White Slave Traffic Act. This forbids taking a woman across a State line for immoral purposes.

The 36 others are held as material witnesses, Hoover said.

Sixty-six Federal agents converged on the nearby community of 20,000 persons and then brought their haul to the Scioto County jail here. They came in special buses and 25 automobiles. Late homegoers said it "looked like a parade."

E. J. Connelley, assistant FBI director, said that arrests in various houses also turned up:

"One Czech automatic, five revolvers, four shotguns, two blackjacks, two daggers, 300 rounds of shotgun ammunition, and 50 rounds of revolver ammunition."

The FBI declared that the Ironton "call house" district caters to workers from nearby industrial towns in Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio.

"The Line, comprosing a two block area is reported to have been operated for the past 60 years by a succession of procurers."

Stassen Hits Red Shipments

bargo on shipments to Russia in a speech in Denver, Colo., nine days ago. He repeated his demand in Texas, Arkansas, Florida and Illinois and nothing he said in the course of his tour brought him more applause.

Democrats as well as Republicans joined in demonstrations when Stassen pointed to the "inconsistency," of shipping American goods to Russia when Vishinsky and other Soviet spokesmen were calling this "a nation of warmongers."

Stassen's speech tomorrow night at Milwaukee will be one of the most important of his career. He is after Wisconsin's 27 delegates to the Republican National Convention. And unless he makes a good showing in the Badger State's primary on April 6, his campaign for the GOP presidential nomination in '48 will be next to hopeless.

Dewey Held Strong

Political reporters from Milwaukee, now with the Stassen party, say that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, is the strongest contender in Wisconsin at this time. They list Stassen next and, after him, Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Theey say also that there is some sentiment for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Stassen, well aware of this situation, is planning to wage an intensive, town-to-town campaign in the neighbor State.

The Minnesota candidate dispatched his telegram to President Truman today after attending church services and taking a hike. His six reasons for stopping the shipment of American machine tools and other hard-to-get machinery to Russia were as follows:

1. Russia has refused to agree to world-wide inspection and to United Nations control over atomic energy, and American tools and machines could play a part in the production of the atomic bomb in Russia.

Held Headed Elsewhere

2. Russia has refused to join in a program of reconstruction for Europe, and the machinery and equipment now going to her is badly needed by America's friends on the continent.

3. The Russians have not permitted a normal flow of machinery and equipment from the steel plants of Czechoslovakia to Western Europe, thereby making more acute the shortages in France, Italy, Belgium and others outside the iron curtain.

4. The Communist parties of France and Italy are currently leading riots and strikes which make more difficult the rebuilding of Europe and also indicate a determination of the Communists to turn to force when they lose in peaceful elections.

5. Officials of the Russian government have in effect called us a nation of warmongers and their government has not repudiated their statements.

6. No one can be confident of the future course of Russian foreign policy under these circumstances and our Government should not take any action which could contribute to the building of a Communist war machine.

Stassen concluded his telegram to Mr. Truman by saying:

"An unending effort must be made to reach sound open agreements with the government of Russia to correct this obstruction and change policies. If such constructive agreements are reached and carried out in good faith, we should help the people of Russia. But there will be a better chance of success if we do not engage in economic appeasement and if there is a common sense consistency in American foreign and economic policy throughout the world.

"I respectfully urge that you reconsider this matter and reverse your decision."

2 Leftist Parties in Italy Indicate De Gasperi Support

Rome, Nov. 23 (AP).—Two moderate leftist parties indicated today they might soon be ready to join the government of Christian Democratic Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

They were Randolfo Pacciardi's Republican Party, which is small but endowed with prestige, and Giuseppe Saragat's Socialist Workers' Party, which broke eight months ago with the pro-Communist Socialist leadership of Pietro Nenni.

In a joint communique, party leaders said they had "decided to examine together the conditions for displacement to the left of the government axis, to guarantee and defend democratic liberty, protect public order and peace, cut off the resurgence of fascism and find solutions to the most pressing economic problems."

Pacciardi to Cooperate

In a subsequent news conference, Pacciardi told Italian reporters this meant that "we are ready to commence negotiations for an arrangement for the formation of a government which can confront, under the best conditions, today's grave situation."

He said his party's aims were "to add our forces to that which the government already has" and as well "to recall the Christian Democrats to their function of the defense of Republican democracy." He offered conditional "collaboration on an emergency program until the elections" next March, to save the Christian Democrats from "anti-Republican alliances and desperate positions."

This was the first time the Republicans and Saragat Socialists, for whom Pacciardi appeared also to speak, had indicated willingness to join a De Gasperi government which lacked Communists.

The far left, upon which the Christian Democrats have put much of the blame for recent rioting in all parts of Italy which took 22 lives, meanwhile continued criticism of De Gasperi in today's newspapers.

Compared to Mussolini

In an editorial in the Communist L'Unita, Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti compared De Gasperi to Benito Mussolini in the early stages of his rise.

In the Socialist Avanti, Pietro Nenni's pro-Communist Socialists published an adopted resolution which said "conservative and reactionary castes" had returned with the support of De Gasperi's government and were imperiling "liberty regained at the cost of the blood of Italian workers."

One Italian economic problem has been high prices. Lately these have been dropping for some items. Today, butchers, without explanation, cut meat prices 20 to 50 per cent, in the wake of a newspaper campaign to give consumers the benefit of recent wholesale price reductions. New prices included 400 to 550 lire a kilogram for brisket of beef, 450 to 600 for lamb, 800 for veal and 500 to 700 for chicken.

(The Italian lira is valued officially at 350 to the dollar. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds).

France Gets New Cabinet

the French Socialists, also declined appointment as vice-premier in charge of social affairs.

As the new premier entered President Auriol's palace with his ministers, he declared:

"We intend to act and we will talk as little as possible. We have before us a considerable and difficult task. We are counting on discipline and the good will of all Frenchmen to carry out this task successfully."

Regarded as a financial expert and little known to the general public, Schuman's task will be to attempt to restore labor peace to striketorn France where one million persons were on strike today in a labor crisis which appeared to be worsening.

Paris stations all but closed down because of the rapidly spreading railwaymen's strike and the possibility that the rail strike might spread throughout the nation arose last night when the National Federation of Railwaymen said it supported the walkout.

A walkout of dock and port workers was set for later today and civil servants in the Paris region went to decide whether to join the school teachers' strike.

The strike of metal and building workers in the Paris area continued to spread to the provinces and some blast furnaces closed down in the Lorraine Basin because of walkouts or lack of coal due to the miners' strike.

The railway strike in Paris affected mainly the suburban lines with most of the long distance expresses leaving after long delays. The Paris-Marseille line, though, was tied up.

Government officials said they felt more concern over what may happen when the capital's subway opens today and buses begin operation. The Communist Party for the past week has been exhorting its followers to refuse to pay the government-decreed 25 per cent increase in fares. That was the way recent rioting began in Marseille.

Voluntary Saving Of Gasoline Seen Possible by AAA

By the United Press

The American Automobile Association warned yesterday that United States motorists may have to adopt voluntary gasoline-saving measures this winter to cope with a threatened petroleum shortage. The AAA said, however, it opposed the imposition of Government controls.

The National Petroleum Council meanwhile called on the Government to release some of the 137 oil tankers which "remain tied-up in the possession of the United States Maritime Commission."

"A serious petroleum shortage is imminent, particularly in the Atlantic seaboard area, if idle Government owned tankers are not released promptly from tie-up and reconditioned and repaired for immediate service," the council said.

Phone Union to Launch Fight on 'Vicious' Laws

The Communications Workers of America yesterday issued a call for a meeting of legislative directors in Washington December 1 to develop a program of political action for the first time in telephone labor history.

President Joseph A. Beirne said:

"We are in a period of reaction as was witnessed by the actions of the Eightieth Congress. Acts of omission by the Congress were as important as their acts of commission. State legislatures in most instances were as vicious as Congress."

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL SAYS:
"Dealers Handling Kaiser-Frazer Cars Offer the Highest Trade-In Allowances"
"I hope that's true of our dealers everywhere!" says Joseph W. Frazer
I don't know that all of the more than 4,000 Kaiser-Frazer dealers are offering "highest trade-in allowances," as reported by the press, but I sincerely hope so. For personally, I feel that the used-car allowances being made by many automobile dealers today are far too low.
We have constantly urged our dealers to offer fair trade-in allowances, based on what cars will bring when they are re-sold, less the cost of handling and reconditioning.
Such fair practices, we tell our dealers, will build for them sound and continuing business.
Before you come to a decision on your next car, I hope you will find out what your Kaiser-Frazer dealer will allow you on your old car. Dealing with him, you'll not only receive fair treatment on both sales and service, but you'll get the most modern automobile built today.

Members of Unitarian Church Back Report on Civil Rights

Members of All Souls' Unitarian Church adopted a resolution supporting the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights yesterday.

By an overwhelming vote, the members called upon the President and Congress "to formulate and pass as rapidly as possible appropriate measures to implement the recommendations of the report . . ."

Among the speakers who supported the resolution was former Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge. He termed the report "a mighty contribution, a great state document . . . an intelligent discussion of dangers which threaten freedom in America."

In opposition, Col. Archibald King said that while he was in sympathy with the broad purposes of the report, that its implementation by removing segregation now practiced in the District schools would "wreck the public school system" and "cause hundreds of parents to move to Maryland and Virginia."

At a meeting after the morning church service at 16th and Harvard sts. nw., constitutional members of the congregation voted 174-18 in favor of the resolution. The Rev. A. Powell Davies is pastor.

Churches generally marked the day as "Freedom of Religion" Sunday. It was one of seven events in the "Week of Rededication" preliminary to the arrival of the "Freedom Train" here Thursday—Thanksgiving Day.

The Rev. Frederick A. McGuire, C. M., addressing a "Freedom of Religion" Sunday observance at St. Matthew's Cathedral denounced communist activities in China.

Father McGuire, exective secretary of the Catholic Welfare Committee of China, said a year ago he obtained a copy of a decree issued by the Communists and outlining their policy in regard to the Catholic and Prosestant churches.

"It was a typical piece of Communist chicanery," he stated. "Freedom of religion was proclaimed, but at the same time the hierarchical order of the Catholic Church was denounced as incompatible with the Communist definition of freedom.

"A few months later I quoted this document to Mr. Lin Chung, Communist liaison officer with the UNRRA when I was trying to persuade him to effect the release of many priests and sisters who were in Communist prisons. He admitted the authenticity of the document, but did not effect the release of the prisoners. The Catholic Church in the areas of China occupied by the Communists is undergoing a persecution as severe as any in history."

The Rev. Earl L. Harrison's 17 years of service to Shiloh Baptist Church, 9th and P sts. nw., was commemorated at yesterday's services. The Rev. John Cooper, on behalf of the church's assistant pastors and the congregation, presented Mr. Harrison with a purse and a testimonial book, the latter including felicitatory messages from fellow churchmen in the District and other States.

U. S. Troop Training In Formosa Reported

Nanking, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Chinese army newspaper Peace Daily said today that combat training of government divisions has begun in Formosa.

This project is scheduled to be under the supervision of U. S. Army officers. Peace Daily said the first students are being schooled in combat tactics by U. S.-trained Gen. Sun Li-jen. Peace Daily also reported the program would be extended to include youths from Formosa, where conscription has begun.

(Formosans, restive under Chinese rule, told Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Davis when he visited Formosa recently that they would resist conscription.)

Marshall Accused of Hypocrisy by Russian Press; Assailed for 'Anti-Soviet' Campaign

Moscow, Nov. 23 (AP).—Pravda accused Secretary Marshal today of "hyprocrisy" and said his speech in Chicago last week revealed him as a proponet of partition of Germany and transformation of the western zones into an anti-Soviet, anti-Democratic coalition.

Both Pravda, the official Communist Party organ, and the government newspaper Izvestia carried lead articles on Marshall's Chicago speech, with special attention paid to his remarks on Germany. They emphasized views of the Soviet press on Germany prior to the opening Tuesday of the conference of Foreign Ministers in London.

E. Zhukov, Pravda commentator, said it was "impossible to avoid the impression that Marshall's call for self-restraint in discussion of international questions was the clearest hyprocrisy. The Chicago speech . . . was essentionally a stimulation of an anti-Soviet campaign."

(Marshall called in his speech for a halt to "brazen and contemptuous" Soviety propaganda. He said also that "as a responsible official of the United States Government I would like to see more restraint than is sometimes exihibited in discussions of international issues.").

Zhukov charged that Germany's economic reconstruction as envisaged by Marshall did not include raising the standard of living for the Germans, but the development of western German industry to serve the purposes of an "American-controlled European league."

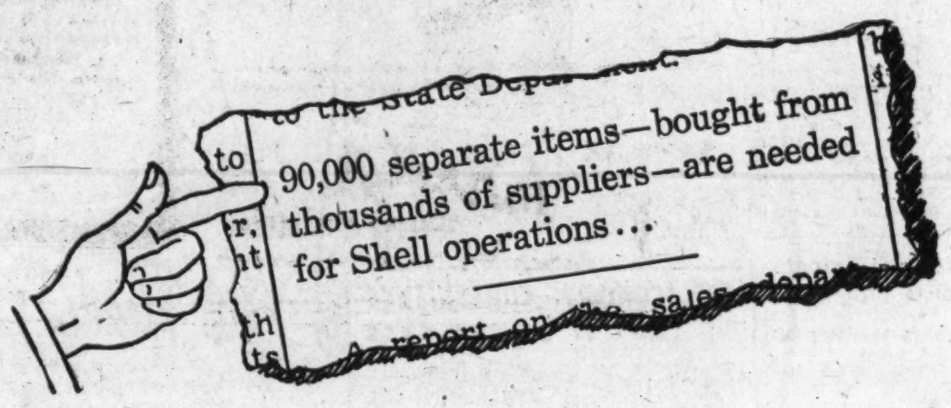
How Shell, as a buyer, does business with your neighbors



Including the kitchen sink:

Most of us, asked what an oil company buys, might say: "Trucks... stations... pumps... things like that." Actually, Shell's purchasing list will include almost any article you can name—yes, even kitchen sinks—and buying is nation-wide.

Doctor, lawyer, trainman, too:

Purchases mean not only things, but services. So Shell buys the services of: construction men and architects... physicians and attorneys... artists and writers. Transportation is a major "buy"—with annual output of one refinery filling a train 1700 miles long.

White mice and black diamonds:

Last year, Shell bought white mice for their laboratories—and industrial diamonds for drilling. On the purchase list you'll find: pins, planes, hairsprings, film, maps, glue, dynamite. Almost every industry and business shares in Shell's purchases.

Playing no favorites:

Highly "decentralized," Shell's purchasing department operates widely separated buying offices. So local merchants and manufacturers—in hundreds of communities—share in filling orders. Shell is a member of your community in buying as well as selling.

$13,000,000 at a whack!

That sum, price of a typical "cat" cracking plant, can be called a big "buy"... though complete refineries cost even more. At the other extreme is a little purchase of 1½ yds. of silk ribbon at 17¢. Millions are spent for trucks and transportation. The monthly supply bill at a single Shell refinery averages over a million.

Taking quality's "measure":

To guide its buyers, Shell has a "Bureau of Standards"—rules determining quality and fair value. Tools and materials purchased must be "just right" for making fine products. So, when necessary, Shell works with manufacturers to help them develop new products or improve old ones.

It's an endless chain:

Every purchase sets a wave in motion. Money spent may be used for the seller's expansion... for new jobs... for salaries. And the salary dollar will go for food ... for homes... clothing... and other needs. No dollar ever stands still in our economy. Shell's are at work throughout the nation.

From farmers and factories:

All phases of production—from agriculture to manufacture—get a share in the business. Beet pulp, used in oil drilling, is just as much on the list as such obvious company needs as pencils, paper, ink, typewriters. And don't forget the unusual purchases—from ashtrays to lawnmowers.

By any yardstick, the petroleum industry is a "citizen" of your community... not only sells but buys locally... pays taxes... supports home-town activities and welfare.

Shell Oil Company, Incorporated

SHELL

A forward-looking company serves the public in all 4 ways

1. The Consumer—through fair prices, good service, and the development of new and better products.
2. The Community—through actions that promote local and national welfare in peace or war.
3. Its Employees—through job security, fair wages, and the opportunity to advance.
4. Its Shareholders—through a fair return on their investment.

KING LEOPOLD

12,000 Seek King's Return To Belgium

Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Twelve thousand Belgians at a tumultuous meeting today demanded the immediate return to the throne of Leopold III, the king who surrendered Belgium to the Nazis in 1940.

The opening of the unofficial "National Congress for the Solution of the Royal Problem" was delayed for five minues while the crowd, a cross-section of the nation, shouted wildly "Long live the King! and "The King! The King!"

Men and women threw their hats in the air, climbed onto their chairs and shook the roof of the great Heysel Palace with their cheers. The palace, largest assembly hall in Belgium, was filled to overflowing by enthusiastic supporters of Leopold.

Although the congress has no official authority, it is supported by several political leaders including former Premier Paul van Zeeland, at present in Indonesia.

After dozens of speeches and the reading of a message from Van Zeeland supporting Leopold's return, the congress unanimously adopted resolutions calling for the immediate rethroning of the King and repeal of the 1945 law declaring him unfit to reign.

Leopold has been living in Switzerland since 1945, when he was released from a German prison. His return to Belgium was blocked by leftists who claimed that his surrender to the Nazis made him incapable of reigning.

The King's brother, Prince Paul, has been regent of the kingdom since its liberation in 1944.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Chambers of Commerce in Virginia will hold their semiannual work conference for executive officers of their organizations at Charlottesville, December 5, the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce has announced.

L. H. Peterson, Charlottesville, is conference chairman. Speakers invited include Gov. William M. Tuck, Colgate W. Darden, president of the University of Virginia; Dr. Lorin Thompson, director of the bureau of population and economic research at the university, and Admiral William F. Halsey.

Round tables will consider problems of chamber administration, finance, industrial development, rackets, and policy of tax agencies. Discussion leaders will include Peter A. Reavis of Covington, T. E. Worrell of Bristol, Robert Morrison of Luray, R. F. Nelson, Walter Dolbeare and J. Malcolm Bridges, all of Richmond, and Bela W. Norton of Williamsburg.

The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation will give a dinner to the secretaries, at which Darden is slated to make the principal address.

Jap Burns Down Shrine For Field, Hangs Self

Tokyo, Nov. (AP).—A 72-year-old farmer in the village of Koichi in northern Japan set fire to the town's shrine, burned it down, and then hanged himself from a nearby tree, the newspaper Mainichi said.

The farmer left behind this note: "Increased production will not come from praying to (Shinto) God. It's best to burn down the shrine and make the site into a paddy field."

Japanese Diet Seeks to Bar Fights on Floor

Tokyo, Nov. 23 (AP).—All parties in Japan's House of Representatives, after three days of flying fists, agreed today that further deliberations should be conducted with "extreme self-containment."

The last three sessions have produced some rousing fights, mainly between the predominant Socialists and the opposition Liberals (conservatives).

Two Liberals were thrown out bodily last night in a free-for-all, during which bodies were thudding all over the Diet floor.

A third Liberal's neck was twisted and his hair pulled by a Socialist when he ran up to Premier Tetsu Katayama and shouted into his ear. It is well known Katayama is not deaf.

Someone finally got a recess declared. Then a Liberal landed a right on a Socialist jaw and fled to the Liberal Party chambers with Socialists in hot pursuit. A locked door saved him from a mauling.

Diet attendants said tea consumption was three to four times normal in the last three hectic sessions during which a coal mines government management bill has been debated.

A group of 130 freshman members from various parties, organizing to see that order is maintained, said the beverage served was something stronger than tea. They complained of drunkenness.

Exclaimed a gallery spectator of last night's melee: "It was better than the Rugby matches."

Cerda in Recital

James John Cerda, District concert pianist, will present selections from Beethoven, Chopin and Godard as well as several of his own compositions in a recital at 8:30 p. m., tomorrow, at the Central Branch of the YMCA, 1736 G st. nw.

Baugh Hurls Six Scores; Skins Upset Cards, 45-21

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Nov. 23.—Overhead, it's perfect weather for football, and underfoot it's a hog-wallow for the team that defends the east goal. Out trot the Chicago Cardinals, owned by the heirs of Charley Bidwell, to meet the Redskins, owned by that grand old man of the game, George Preston Marshall.

POVICH

The National Anthem is disposed of 15 minutes ahead of schedule by the Redskins' band to make way for the important pre-game business of inducting Sammy Baugh into the station-wagon set. Baugh accepts the Touchdown Club's gift with a pretty little thank-you speech, and then poses alongside his snazzy prefinanced job.

The Cardinals' running game unfolds with a 7-yard smash by Marshall Goldberg, and then a 32-yard gallop by Charley Trippi who broke through th eleft side to the Redskin's 35. Todd's tackle prevents a Cardinal touchdown, but at this point you can say Trippi is averaging 32 yards per rush.

The Cardinals' attack not only unfolded, but it refolded. Goldberg fumbled on the next play and John Adams recovers for the Redskins on their 38. Quarterback Paul Christman, trying to hand the ball off, discovered he had a five-man backfield, including Mr. Adams.

First down, Redskins, on the Cardinals' 4. Baugh gets rid of the ball, and Dick Poillon gets rid of Vince Banonis near the sidelines to grab the leather with a one-hand catch before he is forced outside, and it doesn't look good for the Cardinals.

IT LOOKS WORSE FOR the Cardinals now. In fact, it's 7-0, Redskins. Poillon was in the end zone all alone, and took a 3-yard pitch from Baugh and it was at least an escape from boredom.

There's nothing phoney about the Redskins' attack at this point. Marshall is not even sitting in his customary second-story coaching box with its A. T. & T. installations.

The Cardinals go nowhere when they get the ball, but Jim Castiglia does when Baugh lets him have it. Castligia, who is not supposed to know his way around outside guard, actually skirts wide of left end for 8 yards and for some reason is immediately removed from the lineup.

14-0, REDSKINS. BAUGH just changed batterymates, benching Poillon for McKee and making his strategy look good by throwing two passes to McKee. The first carried 33 yards to the Cardinal's 4, and the second was a measly little touchdown pass.

Paul Christman gets into Baugh's act with three completed passes that takes the Cardinals to the Redskins' 21, but they didn't get the yard they needed on fourth down. Pat Harder, trying for that yard, hit the Redskins' line, and vice versa.

14-7. The Cardinals score after the Redskins are penalized for roughing the passer. They didn't quite incapacitate him, though, because two plays later Christman threw a 20-yard touchdown to Mal Kutner who was hanging out in the end zone slightly to the rear of Todd.

17-7, Redskins. In what looks like an utter lack of faith in Baugh, the Redskins boot a field goal on fourth down from the Cardinals' 20. Dick Poillon does it.

24-7, REDSKINS. They go 74 yards in five plays, the last a 34-yard pitch from Baugh to Hugh Taylor who was making his first appearance in the game on the scoring play. He virtually reported to the end zone and waited for Baugh's pass.

31-7, Redskins. Christman's pass falls into the unfriendly hands of Al Demao for a 22-yard runback to the Cardinals' 18, and four plays later Baugh's pass falls into the friendly hands of Sal Rosato for a 15-yard run and a touchdown.

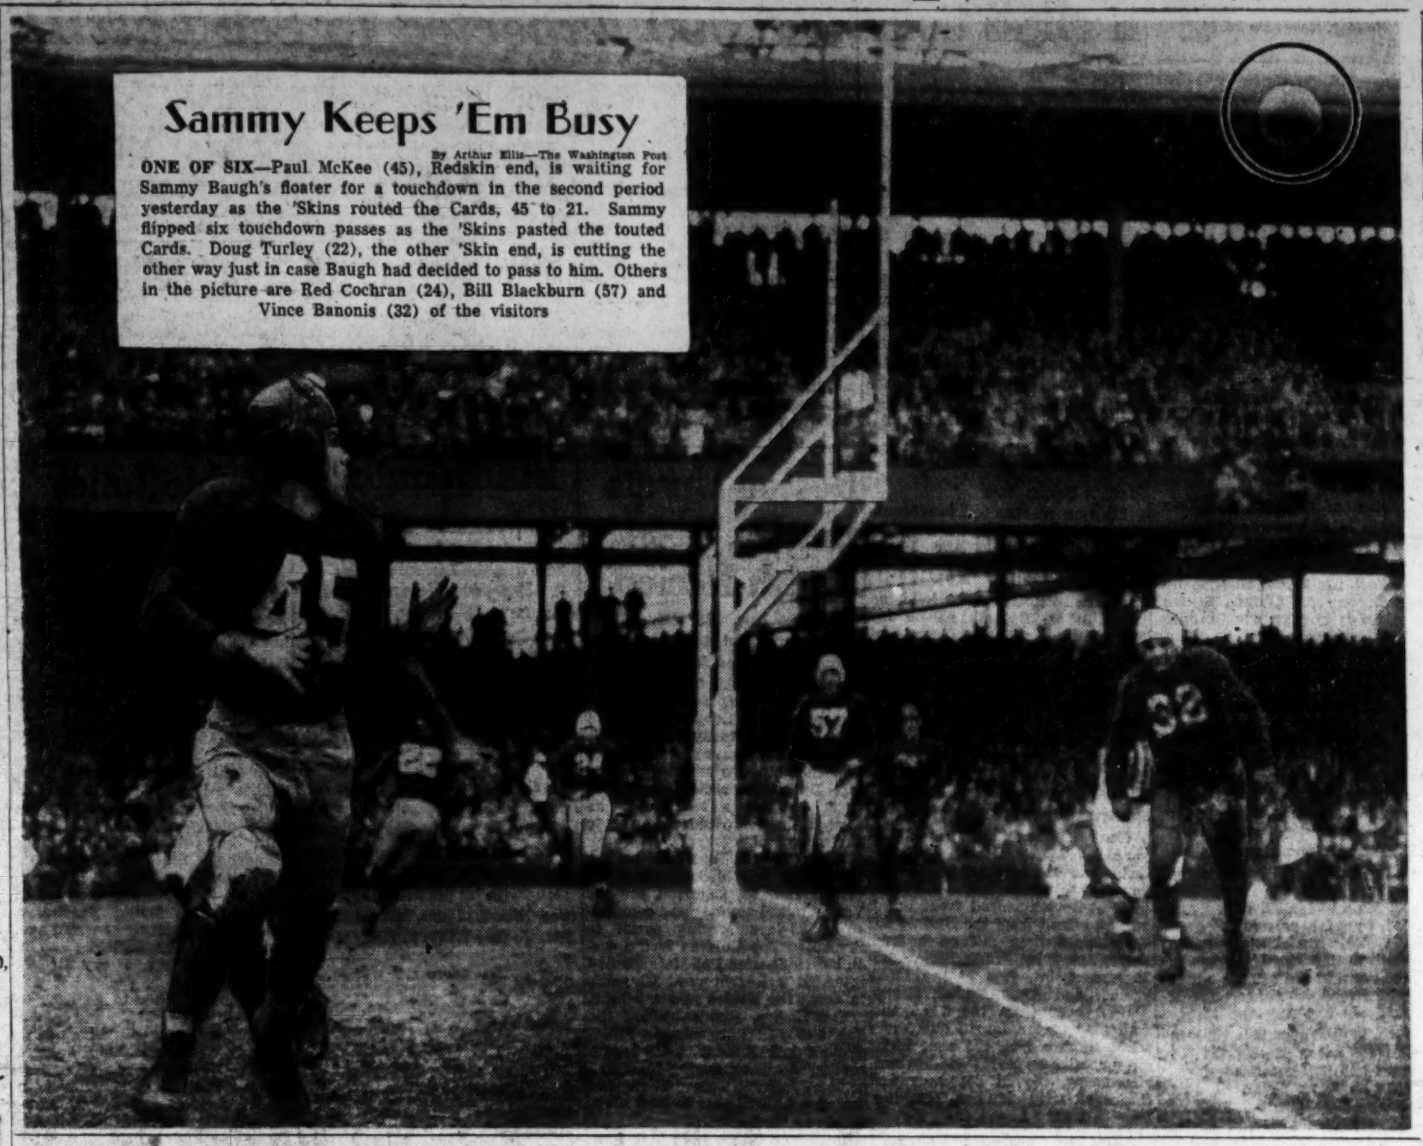
31-14. The Cardinals change pitchers with Ray Mallouf replacing Christman and completing a heave to Pat Harder on the Redskins' 4. Three plays later Harder rushes the ball to a touchdown, a rare but permissible play.

Trippi take Poillon's punt 82 yards to an apparent touchdown, but he has merely wasted his breath. He learns that his Cardinals roughed the kicker on the play, and his dizzy effort resulted merely in a 15-yard gain for the Redskins.

38-14, REDSKINS. 'Tain't funny, McKee, as far as the Cardinals are concerned. He just took another pass from Sammy, 28 yards in the end zone, and racked up another touchdown. It's the old skin game.

45-14, REDSKINS. Baugh is distributing his favors. He just threw one to George Wilde, who was hanging around with nothing else to do, and took the pitch just to keep in practice.

45-21, and the Cardinals get another touchdown to pull up only 24 points behind the team they were supposed to beat by two touchdowns. That shot you heard could be (1) the final gun, or (2) a suicide among the odds-layers.



Sammy Keeps 'Em Busy

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

ONE OF SIX—Paul McKee (45), Redskin end, is waiting for Sammy Baugh's floater for a touchdown in the second period yesterday as the 'Skins routed the Cards, 45 to 21. Sammy flipped six touchdown passes as the 'Skins pasted the touted Cards. Doug Turley (22), the other 'Skin end, is cutting the other way just in case Baugh had decided to pass to him. Others in the picture are Red Cochran (24), Bill Blackburn (57) and Vince Banonis (32) of the visitors

Sammy Ties Own Record; Completes 25 Out of 33

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

They held "Sammy Baugh Day" yesterday at Griffith Stadium and the Washington Redskins' passing man took it seriously.

Slingin' Sam, behind an inspired Washington team, hurled six touchdown passes as the Redskins amazed their most loyal supporters in a mob of 35,361 paying customers with a 45-21 upset of the Chicago Cardinals.

Sammy and Company had no mercy. After five straight beatings they were considered a cinch to lose to the National Football League's Western leader by at least two touchdowns.

'Skins Lead Throughout

They responded by scoring the first two touchdowns of the game, leading comfortably all the way, and trying for more points every second until the final gun.

His six scoring passes were only part of Slingin' Sam's celebration of his own "day." He completed better than 75 per cent of his tosses—25 good ones in 33 attempts—adding 355 yards to Redskin advances.

His scoring record tied his six-touchdown effort against Brooklyn in 1943 and was one short of Sid Luckman's one-game tossing record, also registered in 1943.

Cards Now Tied

The most sensational thing about Washington's victory and Baugh's performance, was that if came over a team that had lost only one game this season while the Redskins have lost six. It came against the league's top defensive team, both in total yards and yards passing.

As a result of their loss the Cardinals dropped down to a tie with the Chicago Bears for Western Division leadership. The Bears spent the afternoon routing Pittsburgh, 49-7.

There were those in the stands who wouldn't believe their eyes when the lowly Redskins, after a 50-yard march, scored first on Baugh's bulletlike shot at Dick Poillon with 11 minutes of the first quarter gone. If they expected to see the mighty Cards retaliate, they were disappointed, for Baugh kept up the hot pace.

Poillon Kicking Flawless

In the second period he hurled 5½ yards to Paul McKee for another touchdown before Poillon topped off a perfect day at extra-point kicking with a 20-yard field goal.

Later touchdowns went to Hugh Taylor for 34 yards, Sal Rosato for 16 yards, McKee again for 28 yards, and finally to George Wilde for 9 yards.

Chicago's attack accounted for exactly seven points in each of the last three quarters—by no means enough.

Paul Christman tossed 19 yards

'Skin Fans Deep In Heart of Texan

"I think you're the greatest bunch of fans any player ever had the opportunity to play before. I thank you!"

With these words Slingin' Sammy Baugh, Washington's Mr. Redskin, yesterday expressed his appreciation for the "Day" given him, along with a $3000 automobile, by football fans of Washington.

One of the most enthusiastic ovations ever heard here greeted tall Sam of Texas, after an introductory speech by Attorney General Tom Clark. Sammy had an amazed whistle to express his opinion of his new car, a maroon station wagon lettered with "Slingin' Sam—the Redskin Man."

And as usual, the stands had long been cleared after the game when Sam was still signing autographs in the center of a large kont of admirers in the middle of the field.

Bears Belt Steelers, 49 to 7; Yanks Tie Browns

Chicagoans Average 11.1 Yards a Try

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Chicago Bears smashed 422 yards during seven scoring thrusts—averaging 11.1 yards per play—to completely overwhelm the Pittsburgh Steelers, 49-7, in a National Football League game before a crowd of 34,142 today.

In addition to being the most lopsided defeat hung on a league team this season, it was the worst licking ever absorbed by a team—either professional or collegiate—coached by Dr. John (Jock) Sutherland.

Sutherland, the former Pitt University coach who had two seasons of pro tutoring with the Brooklyn Dodgers before moving to the Steelers last season, saw his team trampled 48-7 by the Los Angeles Rams in the second game of the 1947 league campaign. Today's defeat was the Steelers' third of the season and snapped a six-game winning streak.

Bears Tie for Lead

The walloping, however, left the Steelers in the Eastern Division leadership since their nearest rivals, the Philadelphia Eagles, were battered, 21-14, by Boston.

The Bears moved into a tie with the Chicago Cardinals atop the Western bracket—each club with seven victories and two losses. The Cardinals stepped out of the lead today by losing, 45-21, to Washington.

The Bears, who gained a total of 281 yards by rushing and 242 by passing while holding Pittsburgh to an overall 316, uncorked single touchdowns in the first and third quarters, scored two in the second and three in the finale.

Bears Unstoppable

They came on thrusts of 65, 85, 41, 80, 67, 47 and 37 yards in a total of 38 plays for the remarkable average of 11.1 yards per signal. These plays included all losses while attempting passes and pass incompletions.

In grabbing their seventh straight win, the Bears counted two touchdown passes by Sid Luckman—bringing his tally to 21 for the season—and one by his understudy, Nick Sacrinty. Two more of Luckman's aerials hit End Ken Kavanaugh outside the end zone which nullified a pair of touchdowns.

In all, Luckman had 8 completions in 19 attempts for 195 yards.

The Steelers' only marker came with one second remaining before the half. They threatened in the opening period when they reached the 6 behind the running of John Clement.

Rams Whack Lions, 28-17

Los Angeles, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams, sparked by Tom Harmon and Jim Benton, breezed to a 28-17 victory over the Detroit Lions today to push the Lions deeper into the National Football League's Western Division cellar.

Harmon, former Michigan flash, tallied twice on an 88-yard punt return and a 26-yard run with an intercepted pass. Benton, veteran end, took 27 and 23-yard throws from Jim Hardy for two other touchdowns.

Detroit, minus the services of ace passer Clyde Le Force, sidelined with an ankle injury, showed little sustained offensive power aside from a 63-yard passing drive in the second quarter. After LeRoy Zimmerman passed 39 yards to Johnny Greene, he flipped one 6 yards to Bill Dudley in the end zone.

Zimmerman's 10-yard pitch to Greene brought a fourth quarter touchdown after Bob Wiese had intercepted a Ram pass deep in Los Angeles territory. Detroit's remaining points came on Zimmerman's 40-yard field goal and pair of conversions.

Treat in Store For Fans at Highs Game

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

A "spectators" game, replete with long runs, passes and touchdowns, is predicted Friday night at Griffith Stadium when the high-powered scoring machines of McKinley Tech and Central meet head-on in the interhigh football championship classic, sponsored by the Board of Education and The Washington Post.

The unscored-upon Trainers of Tech have tallied at least three touchdowns in each of their interhigh clashes with "Breakaway Bugs" Thompson and Cecil Gray, racing as long as 90-yards for scores.

The Central Vikings, who have averaged nearly three scores, will counter the Tech single-wing with their own modified T and single-wing, which uses passes and lateral plays to good advantage.

For the Vikings, Halfbacks Jimmy Pantos and Ross Keith do the passing and they share the running with hard-driving Fullback Dale Leathery.

Trainers Bank On Possession

The offensives of both teams are keyed to peak performance for the Friday night tussle. Tech, with 39 points against Coolidge two weeks ago, and Central with 21 against Western, notched their scoring high marks for the season.

Favored over their unbeaten Viking opponents, the Trainers believe in taking possession of the ball and scoring as quickly as possible, and then taking possession again. That is the secret of their unscored-on record, which is the first since Central's 1917 powerhouse went through its four-game slate spotlessly.

For example, against Coolidge, Tech had possession for 77 per cent of the plays. The Trainers scored five touchdowns in their nine series of downs, the scoring plays covering 12, 68, 66, 27 and 72 yards. They also scored on a 70-yard run after blocking a Coolidge punt.

Compared to Hardell Teams

Old-time interhigh fans are comparing the Tech machine, with its 25 points per game average, with the great Tech teams coached by Hap Hardell from 1923 to '36, during which the Trainers won eight championships and tied for the title twice.

Hap coached Tech to 41 interhigh victories against 4 losses and 7 ties before moving on to George-

Dizzy Strikes Out

Dallas, Nov. 23 (AP).—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean made his debut as a radio football announcer today and expressed the opinion that he was considerably less than a sensation—in fact, quoth the former big league baseball pitcher who was advertised as "master of the split infinitive," "they knocked me plumb out of the box."

Dizzy referred to all the officials as "umpires" or "those guys wearing striped pajamas," and he declared the head linesman was "a guy with a gun who must be low on ammunition or a poor shot, because I ain't never seen him hit nobody."

Two Cadets On All-East

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Eight Eastern colleges placed men on the sector's all-star football team for 1947 in contrast to recent years when Army's dominate outfit garnered virtually all the glory.

The team, selected by the Associated Press after consultations with coaches, scouts, officials and newsmen, does list two Cadets on the first team—Joe Steffy at guard and Elwyn (Rip) Rowan in the backfield.

Steve Suhey, mainstay of the staunch Penn State aggregation, is the other guard while Frank Burns of Rutgers, Gene Rossides of Columbia and Tony Minisi of Pennsylvania, are stationed in the backfield with Rowan.

The tackles are Richard Shimshak of Navy, and Bill Lilienthal of Villanova while Charles Bednarik of Pennsylvania, is the center.

Touchdowners Honor Army And Navy Coaches

A luncheon rally preceding the annual Army-Navy football classic in Philadelphia Saturday will be held in the Presidential ballroom of the Hotel Statler under the Touchdown Club's sponsorship today at 12:30 p. m.

Head Coach Tom Hamilton, of Navy will be guest of honor and main speaker, and will be accompanied to the head table by Edgar "Rip" Miller, line coach: Maj. Hal Harwood, assistant line coach; Bob McLeish, backfield coach; Johnny Wilson, assistant line coach; Eddie Erdelatz, end coach, and Jerry Flynn, director of athletic publicity.

Assistant Line Coach Tom Mesereau also will be present.

Hon. John L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Navy, will be numbered among the guests of honor, while tribute will be paid Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates, who has been named by President Truman to succeed Gen. A. A. Vandegrift as commandant of the Marine Corps.

New Yorkers Miss Chance For Goal Try

New York, Nov. 23 (AP). — A mental lapse cost the New York Yankees a possible victory over the Cleveland Browns today when the Yankees failed to call time out until too late and thus were denied the chance to try for a field goal. As it was the two cubs fought to a 28-to128 deadlock.

Cleveland had moved into the deadlock midway in the final period on a 90-yard march that wound up with Jimmy Dewar blasting over from the four.

New York received the ensuing kickoff and on the first play from scrimmage Buddy Young popped through the middle of the line for 24 yards and in three more land attempts the Yankees worked the ball to the Browns' 44 and another first down.

Spec Sanders and Young then moved it to the 31 and on the next play Sanders' fumble was recovered by Young on the 38. Another running play was tried and when the Yankees took their time untangling themselves, time ran out although Coach Ray Flaherty had Harvey Johnson, who ran his extra point kicking to 33 in a row during the fray, hurrying in from the sideline.

The gome started out as if the Yankees would gain their first victory over Cleveland in five tries with ease.

They scored the first two times they handled the ball, going 54 yards for the first time and 74 the

San Francisco, Nov. 23 (AP).—Villanova's Wildcats came from behind to score two touchdowns in the final period and defeat the University of San Francisco Dons, 21-19, today in a thrill-filled intersectional football game before a crowd estimated at 20,000.

Terp Stock Soars

Maryland, Oklahoma Are No. 1 On Florida 'Gator Bowl List

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland and Oklahoma are the No. 1 choices of the Jacksonville, Fla., 'Gator Bowl Committee for the January 1 football game there, The Washington Post learned last night.

J. B. Darby, member of the 'Gator Bowl Committee, will be in the stands at College Park Saturday to watch the Terrapins close out their season against dangerous North Carolina State.

Oklahoma, cochampions of the Big Six Conference, played in last season's 'Gator Bowl, trouncing North Carolina State. The Sooners were then coached by Jim Tatum, present Maryland mentor, and made a big hit in Jacksonville.

Oklahoma, under Bud Wilkinson, Tatum's assistant there last year, has won five of its games this season, lost two (to Texas and Texas Christian) and tied one, unbeaten Kansas.

Terrapin Bowl stock soared Saturday when the Old Liners conked Vanderbilt, 20-6, to knock the Commodores out of an almost certain Orange Bowl invitation.

While the Terps wind up their regular season play against N. C. State, 7-2 upset victors over Virginia Saturday, Oklahoma will be closing out against its traditional rival, the Oklahoma Aggies. 'Gator Bowl representatives will be there, too.

Packers Rally in Last Period to Tie Giants, 24-24, and Avert Big Upset

Jack Jacobs Hurls Three Touchdowns

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Green Bay's Packers and the New York Giants played to a 24-24 deadlock today as the visitors came from behind in the final period to stave off a defeat that would have been one of the major upsets of the National Football League season.

A slim turnout of 27,939 watched Indian Jack Jacobs hurl the last of three touchdown passes which brought the Packers a standoff with six minutes and five seconds remaining, thus spoiling a heroic Giant bid for their first triumph in nine starts this season.

It was "Paul Governali" day at the Polo Grounds and the Giant aerial ace kept the home club in front most of the way by completing two touchdown passes and setting up the third marker with a neat toss.

Packer Line Holds

A 29-yard pass from Governali to George Cherverko, following an interception of a Jacobs heave, took the Giants to the 2-yard line late in the third period but four cracks at the line by Jim Blumenstock still left the Giants a foot shy of what might have been the winning tally and the Packers went on to tie it up.

It was Frank Reagan, however, who opened the way for the last Packer marker by fumbling on the Giants' 26. Herman Rohrig recovered for Green Bay and two plays later Jacobs passed 24 yards to Nolan Luhn who was all alone in the end zone.

Ward Cuff, who also kicked a 22-yard field goal in the second period, booted his third conversion and neither team threatened thereafter.

Jacobs Tosses Score

Green Bay scored first when Jacobs tossed 28 yards to Luhn, but the Giants came back to tie it up when Governali passed 15 yards to Tex Coulter at the end of a 60-yard march.

A 17-yard Governali pass to Ray Poole set up another Giant marker in the first period, scored by Blumenstock from 2 yards out.

Ken Strong, who kicked the three extra points for New York, booted a 28-yard field goal to match Cuff's effort in the second period, equalled in the third quarter by Jacobs' 27-yard toss to Jim Gillette at the end of an 80-yard drive.

Final Week

Two Stakes Scheduled For Bowie

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Maryland's ebbing fall racing campaign has two big punches left. With a week to go, Bowie stages the $10,000 added Endurance Handicap on Thanksgiving Day and the $20,000 added Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap on Saturday.

Horses of all ages will have a crack at one of the two rich offerings. The Endurance, at a mile and 70 yards, is an exclusive test for 2-year-olds, while the Bryan and O'Hara is for 3-year-olds and up over a mile and three-sixteenths.

Developments of the last 10 days have added luster to both races.

The Endurance, as the name implies, is likely to give an inkling of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness prospects of several juveniles who have rounded into form late this year. At least three of these have come to the fore at the Bowie session.

Fritz Maisel Promising

Marylanders will be watching and backing Alan T. Clarke's Fritz Maisel—foaled, raised and raced, thus far, only in the Free State. This son of Little Beans turned in his third victory of the autumn in the $10,000 added Bowie Breeders' Stake, a test exclusively for Maryland foals.

Fritz Maisel goes this time in an "open" race. He carries 114 pounds and will meet two juveniles who have shone at this meeting—High Ground Stable's Hefty, assigned 117, and Belair Stud's Vashti, with 112.

This trio, each a winner at Bowie, may have to face Mrs. J. T. Maloney's Big If. However, the son of King Cole was assigned 121 pounds and is not on the grounds, being considered a doubtful starter.

The remainder of the field may include Brookmeade Stable's Fertile Lands, S. W. Labrot, jr.'s Bovard, O. S. Demings' Bill Howk, P. A. Rothfuss' Gain A Foot, Brandywine Stable's No Warning, Cedar Farm's No Bull and Joe Tucci's Fresh Breeze.

Gallorette May Go

There is a good chance of W. L. Brann's Gallorette, champion money-winning mare, showing her wares in the Bryan and O'Hara. Trainer Ed Christmas, who had decided to retire her for the year, gave her a workout last week.

The trouble Double Jay had in getting home a head in front of Master Bid in last Saturday's Prince George may lead Christmas to change his mind and send the gallant daughter of Challenger II after the $20,000 pot.

In addition to Double Jay and Gallorette, the line-up is likely to include J. H. Hammond's Butler, winner of the E. K. Lynch Memorial, but a disappointment last weekend.

However, with the Bryan and O'Hara over a longer route, Butler would be better suited. In addition, there's no doubting Butler's liking for the Bowie oval.

Hapless Colts Fall Again to Bills, 33-14

Baltimore, Nov. 23 (AP).—Scoring in every period, the Buffalo Bills kept alive their hopes for the Eastern Division title in the All-America Football Conference today by defeating the Baltimore Colts, 33-14, in a rough contest before 17,593 persons.

Bucalo's stout line tore big holes in the Colt forwards, and the Bills, led by Julie Rykovich and Chet Mutryn, romped to an easy victory, their eighth against three losses and a tie.

Mutryn Scores Two

Mutryn, who scored two touchdowns, capped a 46-yard drive by bouncing over from the 3-yard line for Buffalo's first tally after eight minutes.

After Baltimore was held on the Bills' 1, Buckets Hirsch intercepted a Bud Schwenk pass and galloped 45-yards to make it 13-0 midway in the second stanza.

The Colts came right back, driving 80 yards in 8 plays, with Schwenk's pass from the 17 to Billy Hillenbrand on the goal the payoff. A Schwenk-Lamar Blount aerial ate up 42 yards, and Sinkwich went 18 in the push.

Ratterman Tosses One

George Ratterman passed 17 yards to Marty Comer, and the latter ran 41 more yards to score in the third period. Moments later Rykovich scored from the 2 after a march from the Buffalo 46.

Baltimore then put on a long drive, aided by Frank Sinkwich's 29-yard sprint, late in the third period, and Andy Dudish finally plowed over from the 1 on the fifth play of the fourth quarter.

But Buffalo took the next kickoff, and with Rykovich and Mutryn alternating, moved 65 yards for the final tally, Mutryn crashing over center from the 3-yard marker.

Fists flew on several occasions, with officials sending Jack Carpenter, Buffalo tackle, and Hub Bechtol, Colt end, to the showers for mixing it in the third period.

Dodgers Lose To Dons, 16-12

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—Three field goals and an extra point by Ben Agajanian and the chucking of Charley O'Rourke carried the Los Angeles Dons to a 16-12 All-America Conference decision over Brooklyn today before 11,866 fans although the Dodgers took a six-point lead into the final quarter.

It was O'Rourke, the former Boston College passer, who sparked the Los Angeles club in its late spurt to an initial win for its new coaches, Ted Shipkey and Mel Hein, who succeeded Dud De Groot during the week.

O'Rourke hit with 8 of 12 tosses for 158 yards, setting up two field goals and a touchdown that was scored by John Kimbrough in a smash from the 3.

The five field goals, three by Agajanian and two by Phil Martinovich, set a new conference record.

Both Martinovich, the Dodgers' left-footed kicker, and Agajanian had missed field goal attempts in the second quarter before the Dodgers scored on a spectacular 60-yard pass play from Hoernschemeyer to Al Akins.

Martinovich, whose extra point try was blocked, added three more points later with a field goal from the 24. In the third period Martinovich booted a three-pointer from the 16.

Trailing 6-12 in the last quarter O'Rourke's tosses to Kimbrough and Harry Clarke lifted the Dons along a 97-yard march, climaxed by Kimbrough's 3-yard touchdown run. Naturally, Agajanian added the extra point to make it 13-12 in favor of Los Angeles. Just to make it stick, Agajanian booted a 32-yard goal half way through the quarter.

50,000 Expected to See Last High Games

More than 50,000 fans are expected to watch the Washington high schools close their football seasons this week with five games of the traditional rivalry variety.

Biggest crowd attraction will be the interhigh championship game, sponsored by the Board of Education and The Washington Post. With McKinley Tech and Central renewing their 45-year-old series in the title game, the interhigh record crowd of 18,571 set in last year's championship classic, is expected to be topped.

The week's slate begins Thanksgiving morning at 11 o'clock when George Washington of Alexandria entertains its Arlington rival, Washington-Lee, with the Northern Virginia Class A Conference title at stake. The G. W. stadium, which holds 11,500, is sold out for the twenty-fourth renewal of their series for the "Old Oaken Bucket."

W.-L. leads in the series, 12-8, three games having resulted in ties. It can gain permanent possession of the trophy by winning Thursday, since W.-L. has beaten G. W. two years in a row. However, George Washington, with its 6-2-1 record against Washington-Lee's 7-3-0, is favored.

The Fairfax-Mount Vernon game, the second in that Thanksgiving Day series, should sell 4000 tickets. And the annual Calvin Coolidge-Parkersburg, W. Va., game at Parkersburg, also on Thanksgiving, is expected to draw 10,000, the same as last lear.

Advance ticket sales for the annual Gonzaga-St. John's Catholic High championship game Sunday at Griffith Stadium indicate that about 15,000 fans will turn out. It's the eighteenth renewal of their series, and for the first time since 1939, St. John's, undefeated and untied, will take the field the favorite. The Johnnies can earn a bid to the Catholic Youth Organization bowl game in New Orleans, by winning their ninth straight.

Boston Upsets Eagles, 21-14, In 4th Period

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP).—Boley Dancewicz tossed two touchdown passes and scored himself to give the Boston Yanks their first win over the Philadelphia Eagles in National Football League history by a 21-14 margin today before a 15,368 crowd at Fenway Park.

With about two minutes remaining, Dancewicz raced around his right end for a touchdown, although he had intended to pass to Don Currivan.

Early in the opening period, Dancewicz had clicked off a 30-yard aerial to Currivan for the Yanks' initial counter and completed a 20-yard scoring aerial to Freshman Joe Golding in the second period, after Pat McHugh had returned a Boston punt 68 yards to move the Eagles into a 7-7 tie.

The Eagles, who subjected the Yanks to a 32-0 drubbing in Philadelphia last Sunday, pulled into another deadlock during the third period, after Tom Thompson hurled a 45-yard pass to Neil Armstrong on Boston's 10.

Steve Van Buren then took four slams at the Boston line before going over for his ninth touchdown of the season.

Early in the final period, the Eagles twice drove, once by air, to the Yanks' 10. The first thrust ended with Jim Kekeris missing a 20-yard placement field goal try and Red Maley checked the other with a pass interception.

That grab set the stage for the Yanks' "clincher," for Dancewicz clicked off two long heaves to Frank Seno and Hal Crister to move his forces 75 yards to the Eagles' 10. From there, Boley made 4 on a quarterback sneak before his passing miscue backfired into the winning touchdown.

Bill Bennings:

At Bowie.

DEAR FOLKS:

Marylanders bought and sold horses at the Lexington sales. C. E. Nelson, who operates a breeding farm at Ritchie, Md., sold three homebreds by Alaking for $9200, while Trainer Bobby Curran bought four yearlings which will remain in Kentucky until spring. Curran is Hialeah-bound. Jockey Arnold Kirkland, one of the several top breeders developed at Charles Town, reports here to accept mounts on Monday. Don Waters has sold Max Putziger's Omashame to Jerry Greene for $2000. Yates, along with his promising apprentice, Dick Williams, left for Florida. Jockey Willie Nertney visited here. He suffered a back injury at Timonium and will have to wear a brace until next year. Carson Kirk's suspension which takes effect with the Monday card will doubtless cost him the riding championship of this meeting. Palmer Heagerty, ace form chart caller, has left for Miami. Student Lamp, the 2-year-old who was almost knocked down last Saturday and came on to win, is not eligible for the $70,000 added Endurance Handicap on Thanksgiving Day. Alan Clarke continues to get big offers for his Fritz Maisel. One of the most recent was $15,000 for a half share. We will find cut Thursday just how good is the Little Beans colt. See you on the rail. . . . BILL.

Team Match Added To Wrestling Card

A two-man team match in which Ace Freeman and Steve Gob will tackle Francois Mignette and Steve Corona has been added to Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. Nanjo Singh tangles with the Swedish Angel in the feature. In the semiwindup will be Frederick von Schacht and Hans Kampfer.

Herbie Jones Fights Osario Here Tonight

Hoping to break a jinx that has hovered over local fighters for the last three weeks, including himself, Herbie Jones, 20-year-old Southeast biffer, takes on Puerto Rican boxer Filberto Osario, in tonight's feature 10-rounder at Turner's Arena.

Tonight marks Herbie's first fight as a legitimate featherweight in nearly a year. Jones was going along nicely against lightweights until he collided with Johnny (Honeyboy) Bratton, at Turner's last August.

After that Herbie won from rough, tough, Willie Roache, a lightweight, about three weeks ago, and dropped the decision.

Jones' handlers, Harry Groves and Lew Jamison, decided it was time for the Biffer to go back to the featherweights, and have trained him down to 126 pounds.

Osario has beaten such fighters as Charlie Riley, Ham Willoghby and fought some good fights with Sanday Saddler and Spider Armstrong.

In five-rounders Kid Alexander boxes Jimmy Brown, Jimmy Jones faces Johnny Hanbury and Walter Rowan of Richmond tackles Jimmy Briscoe. Fours show Sam Jefferson versus Charlie Duker and Miles Jones versus Lucky Stevens.

Thrills Loom In Highs Game

town University where he now coaches track. Recovering from a serious back operation, Hardell recalled yesterday that in 1930 and again in 1934, eight Tech players were named to the first-string All-High team.

In 1934 and again in '36, the Techites went through their four-game league slates unscored upon, but tied by Eastern.

Products Climbed Higher

Some of Hap's boys who went on to make good in college football were Tackle Jack Cline at Ohio State, Hal Wreightman at Duke, Tackle Sid Kolker at George Washington, the late Reds Daley, a tackle, at Georgetown, and the late Charlie Pugh, halfback at Maryland.

Central, which hasn't finished in a grid playoff berth in 5 years, is hoping that this year will open an era comparable to that of 1916-23, when under Coach Cuvier A. Metzler, the Vikings were undefeated against interhigh opposition. Only Tech, in 1917, was able to hold Central to a 7-7 tie.

Metzler said yesterday he hadn't missed a Central-Tech game since 1916, and would be at Griffith Stadium rooting for the Vikings Friday night.

1917 Team Rated Best

Metzler's 1917 team was perhaps the greatest scoring combination in Washington public high history. Against all comers, college freshman, prep and high school, Central rolled up 367 to 9 for the opposition, with its interhigh foes being held scoreless.

This Viking team, led by Jay Long at fullback, Dave Wilson at half and Bud Belnap at quarterback, set the interhigh scoring record that season by swamping Business High (now Roosevelt), 120-0.

Tech was smashed, 33-0; Western was downed, 13-0, and Eastern fell, 48-0. So it was Central, 214, opponents, 0, in interhigh that year.

The Bears, geared to Mike Holovak's average of 16 yards in 5 carries, Joe Osmanski's 7 in 9 and Don Kindt's 5.5 in 8 scored this way:

1. Luckman passed consecutively 17 yards to George McAfee and 34 to Jim Keane with Scooter McLean (who converted after each touchdown) crashing over from the 2.

2. Luckman hit McAfee for 16, Keane for 17 while Kindt bashed the line in an 80-yard drive topped by Luckman's 6-yard scoring toss to Kavanaugh.

3. Holovak sprinted 60 yards on a screen pass from Luckman, then McAfee belted the remaining 4.

4. Kindt and Osmanski drilled the line for 38 yards after Bob Cifer's pass was stolen and Kindt squirmed over from the 3.

5. Holovak broke loose for 52 yards and Luckman then pitched 6 yards to Keane in the end zone.

6. Moon Mullins ran back Morales' pass 51 yards and Sacrinty tossed 26 to Kavanaugh.

7. George Gulyanics streaked 44 yards to a touchdown.

next. In each series Sanders wound up going over the final stripe.

The next period saw the Yankees getting two more tallies and the Browns one.

The first New York marker came when Sanders whipped through for 27 yards on a delayed buck and Young got one on a 6-yard trip after Dewey Proctor had intercepted one of Otto Graham's passes and lugged it 34 yards to the Brown 16.

A Graham to Bill Boedker pass that was good for 34 yards brought Cleveland its first touchdown just before the half.

At the start of the second half the Yankees dominated still, but when the Browns took the ball on downs on their own 1 the complexion changed.

On the very first play, Graham stepped deep into his own end zone and passed to Mac Speedie, who wasn't downed until he had gained 83 yards. That gave the Browns, who last week clinched the Western championship, the lift they needed.

Graham passed to Motley for the score and set the stage for Dewar's levelling smash in the fourth.

The 70,060 spectators, second largest crowd ever to see a pro game in New York, watched Graham establish an All-America Conference passing record with 325 yards gained on 15 completions in 26 attempts. The old mark was 294 yards by George Ratterman of Buffalo earlier this year.

to Mal Cutner for one score, Pat Harder bounced over from a yard out for the second and when it didn't matter in the least, Elmer Angsman hit the line for a couple of inches to tally after a wild aerial onslaught.

Christman and Charley Trippi, the Cards' aces to this point, were a dismal disappointment yesterday. Paul, trailing only Luckman for passing honors in the West, completed only 8 out of his 20 aerials for 92 yards.

He gave up after the first half, turning over passing duties to Ray Mallouf who clicked on 13 tosses out of 24 for 199 yards.

Speedster Trippi was sent at the Redskin line only five times, picking up 48 yards. Thirty-one of those yards came on a first-period dash that was voided by Marshall Goldberg's fumble two plays later. His longest dash, for 82 yards as the final quarter opened was called back when the Cardinals were penalized for roughing kicker Poillon.

Skins Shred Card Defense

The Redskins were held only once before starting the onslaught that accounted for 488 yards against a team that has allowed an average of only 276 yards a game to date. Chicago attacks fizzled twice before Mallouf kicked to Eddie Saenz who carried back to midfield.

Washington's only outside help on the way to a score was a Cardinal offside penalty. Highlighting the march was Poillon's one-handed catch of a Baugh pass for 15 yards and a first down at Chicago's 4. Jim Castiglia pushed ahead 1 yard before Baugh drilled Poillon with the pay-off pass slightly over the line.

The Cardinals' next bit of offense resulted in the first of two painful but not serious injuries to its players. Goldberg, veteran star from Pittsburgh, was helped off the field with a damaged leg. Halfback Charlie Smith later was carried from the field with a slight concussion.

McKee Hauls in Pass

That their first points were no fluke the Redskins proved the next time they took possession. A clipping penalty pushed them back to their own 42, but they'd wormed up to the Cardinal 37 when Baugh caught McKee with the first of two fancy slants.

McKee had all the appearance of an outfielder going back to the wall for a catch as he romped under the ball and made it a 33-yard gain before he was brought down on the 4.

An offside penalty hurt a little but on second down Baugh sneaked another pass to McKee after 33 seconds of play in the second frame.

A 45-yard advance that was stopped 21 yards short of payoff territory preceded the Cardinals' first scoring. Then it took Johnny Cochran's interception of Baugh's pass on the Chicago 33 to set it up.

Christman completed two passes and a Redskin roughing penalty brought the ball to the 19 where a third Christman toss, to Kutner, spelled touchdown, while defender Dick Todd was out of position.

At halftime it was 17-7 favoring the Redskins because they ran short of time and downs on a march of 50 yards to the Cardinal 14. Slightly over a minute was left when Poillon from a slight angle on the 20-yard marker booted a perfect field goal.

Baugh Does It Again

Five plays was all the Redskins needed to boost it to 24-7 in the third quarter. Seventy-four yards were eaten up as Rosato carried three times and Baugh passed twice to Doug Turley for 19 yards and to Hugh Taylor, just in the game, for the final 34 yards.

Chicago had one chance, lost it, when Al Demao intercepted Christman's pass, and Washington was at it again.

This time the Tribe had only 19 yards to go and got all but three of it on the fourth-down screen pass that Baugh dropped Rosato's way. Four blockers were in front of Sal and only two defenders.

Harder Breaks Monotony

Mallouf was in full charge of the throwing department when Coach Jim Conzelman's boys worked up steam enough for a second touchdown march. Big Ray tossed five times in the series that followed Poillon's short punt to the Cardinal 33.

Four were good and the fifth was into the East stands. They finally had to give the ball to Harder from the 1-yard line and the ex-Wisconsin ace made it handily.

Baugh and Mallouf traded interceptions as the third quarter closed but Washington had the best of the trade. Poillon took an end-zone pass, ran it to the 15 and there began another D. C. scoring drive. The only interruption was Trippi's 82-yard run with Poillon's punt, called back.

McKee Scores

Poillon was being accused of "dogging it" when, as safety man, he waved Trippi past him on the Redskin 30 but the blond defender had seen officials call the Cardinals for roughing.

The ball went back to the Cardinal 38 with Washington still in possession and three plays later there was another six points on the board.

Rosato was stopped at the line, one Baugh-to-McKee heave earned 10 yards and another earned touchdown No. 5. McKee wobbled under the ball a couple of yards out and fell over the goal.

Mallouf passed on nine straight plays after the kickoff, reaching the Redskins' 8-yard line before Tom Farmer made a diving catch of the final toss in the end zone.

Farmer Big Factor

Farmer also figured largely in the last Redskin score with a beautiful catch for 22 yards. Other Baugh passes went to Saenz for 10 yards and to McKee for 13 twice before Wilde was elected to take the important one. The rookie back was in the clear on the 5-yard line and had no trouble getting over.

Not that it mattered but the Cardinals came back with a 72-yard march. Mallouf was again the motor, an 11-yard heave to Harder almost being good enough before Angsman plowed over for the last few inches.

Fans who expected Baugh and Washington to play it safe from there in, were surprised. They got only one more offensive chance, on the last play of the game, but Baugh was trying for his seventh touchdown pass when he hurled 21 yards to Saenz.

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, available at extra cost.

You're only doing what comes naturally if you boast just a little when a brand-new automobile comes into your life.

That being so, why not do the job up brown — and make sure your future holds some things that are really worth bragging about?

Things, for instance, as far out front as the styling you see here — bright and fresh as tomorrow morning and just as sure a herald of what's in the wind.

Things like Fireball power, eight cylinders big, that puts wings on your going and zoom into every cross-country run.

Things like the comfort of three-person seats, and the good solid steadiness that only enough roadweight can give you.

Things like Safety-Ride rims that give you the softness of 25-lb. tire pressures, yet mean firmness and control in tight spots and more traction from more rubber on the road.

Things like four coil springs, one on each wheel, that put a cushion over every bump and make front-seat and back-seat rides equally soft and buoyant.

POLITICAL ACTION— Labor's Blind Alley

THE APPROACH of the 1948 elections brings organized labor in America to a fork in the road.

Straight ahead lies the familiar route of free collective bargaining. Except for an occasional side trip, labor has been traveling it for years. On this road the role of government is to act as traffic cop, removing obstructions for all travelers.

The fork is the road of political action – the road to special privilege for labor. On it government is called upon to clear a special right of way for organized labor – to push aside all others.

Which of these two roads will organized labor take?

Most American labor leaders are now urging their followers toward political action. Their first objective is to "get" all members of Congress who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act. AFL plans to raise a $5 million political combat fund through contributions and a per capita tax on its membership. CIO is soliciting $1 donations for political action from its 6,000,000 members.

For their own sake, however, as well as for the welfare of the country as a whole, the rank and file of organized labor will do well to stop, look and listen before they turn their unions into political action squads. If they examine the facts for themselves, they will make two significant discoveries:

I. Political action is a blind alley for labor.

II. The Taft-Hartley Act is an essential bulwark of free collective bargaining.

A brief discussion of these two statements will show what they mean to organized labor.

I

Political action is a blind alley for labor.

If there is any doubt about that statement, a good way to dispel the doubt is to look at European countries where organized labor has been following a political action line.

Britain, where the Labor Party is in power, is such a country. How is labor faring there? Measured by the good things money buys, the average hourly wage in Britain is less than two-thirds of what it is in the United States. Part of the difference may be accounted for by the fact that the British Isles are poorer in natural resources than the United States. Another reason is the war damage to Britain's plants.

But there are two other big reasons why the British wage earner is far behind the American worker in enjoying the good things of life:

1. The incentive to produce has been dulled by vote-catching programs which promise economic security and a levelling of incomes. Lulled by promises of cradle-to-the-grave security and discouraged by high taxes, the British have descended to a state neatly described by the London Economist:

   "Nobody gains anything from activity or suffers anything from inactivity."

2. To run a program like Britain's requires more and more government functionaries. Civilian employees of the British government have increased by 50% since before the war, putting one worker out of ten on the government payroll. More and more people stop producing and spend their time instead cutting up what others produce. The result is smaller production, higher taxes and lower real wages.

The British Labor Party must accept most of the responsibility for this sorry state of affairs. It is due primarily to a program of political action by organized labor which promised the individual worker security and equality of income – but which can not deliver either because the incentive to work is gone.

The lesson for American wage earners is clear. Political action by unions to enforce the economic fallacy of more-and-more-for-less-and-less will end by impoverishing the working man – and bringing the nation to ruin.

Unions exist for collective bargaining, not for politicking.

II

The Taft-Hartley Act is an essential bulwark of free collective bargaining.

Bargaining works satisfactorily only when both parties – management and labor – think they are getting a fairly even break.

Management was very sure that the Wagner Act, as administered from 1935 to 1947, was giving employers the short end of the stick. Furthermore, management's feeling of frustration was no whim. It was justified by case after case where rights were granted to organized labor with no counterbalancing recognition of the rights of management, of individual workers or of the public.

The Taft-Hartley Act goes a long way toward establishing equality in employer-union relations. It may fall short of doing a perfect job. As a subsequent editorial in this series will show, it leaves virtually untouched the public menace of industry-wide bargaining and labor monopoly. And it leaves unprotected what should be the individual's right to hold a job without joining any particular organization. But it does provide some major safeguards for collective bargaining by striking at abuses.

Organized labor, therefore, has no cause to damn the members of Congress who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act. True, the law will check what has been an uninterrupted march of the labor union bosses toward absolute power. It will do so just as laws in the past – The Sherman Anti-Trust Act, for example – have checked management when it was too greedy. And, as the first section of this editorial points out, the time has come to check the march of the big labor bosses.

Fundamentally, the Taft-Hartley Act gives free collective bargaining a new lease on life. The old lease was running out because the Wagner Act stacked the cards against employers, against individual workers, and against the public.

The road to free collective bargaining is now clear of many of the most menacing obstructions. It is the only road for labor to take in its own self interest. Union Workers who let their leaders lure them down the blind alley of political action will do so at their own peril—and at the peril of this great industrial nation.

What Am I Saying! — By Frank Morgan

Chest Rally For Victory Is Scheduled Tomorrow

Chairman Asks Workers Pledge Completion of Tasks in Drive

A mass meeting of workers in the Community Chest Federation's drive for $3,900,000 will be held tomorrow night at 6 at the Mayflower Hotel.

Volunteers in the 1948 campaign were urged yesterday to "demonstrate their faith in the purpose" of the drive by attending the rally, by Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr. He described the meeting as a "preview of victory" get-together.

The campaign, originally scheduled to end tomorrow, has been continued until December 12. Less than 60 per cent of the total has been subscribed.

Pledges to Be Asked

At the rally, every solicitor present will be asked to pledge himself to completing his campaign tasks.

"I believe that we can make a real demonstration of our faith in the Community Chest idea, and of our genuine desire to serve other people," Foley declared, "by coming to this preview of victory on Tuesday with the fullest reports we can make of the work we will do on Monday and Tuesday."

The meeting will take the form of a Dutch-treat buffet supper, spiced at frequent intervals by progress bulletins based on the day's reports from campaign solicitors.

All reports received up to 8 p. m. tomorrow will be officially announced at the meeting campaign leaders said. At its last report on Friday, the drive for funds for 125 Red Feather agencies had produced $2,336,868.

The sum represented contributions from about 225,000 persons in Greater Washington.

The meeting will hear a special message from the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington. Guests of honor will be members of the public relations committee of the Federation, led by Chairman Matt Meyer. Tribute also will be paid to representatives of the suburban units of the drive.

Previous plans for centering attention on the achievements of workers in Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties had been made for a meeting originally set for this afternoon in order to give volunteers more time to solicit gifts.

Today, at 5 p. m., 21 boys of St. Joseph's Home and School will receive special opening-day programs from Campaign Chairman Foley. The programs carry the signatures of many of the prominent guests who attended the opening campaign rally, including General Dwight Eisenhower and Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder.

The boys sang at the rally, held November 7 on the south steps of the Treasury.

Alumni Wouldn't Know the District Jail Today . . .

GONE ARE THE DAYS—A double chain link fence now surrounds District Jail, the inner one 10 feet high, the outer one 12 feet high. In background is a tower manned 24 hours a day by guards. An escaping prisoner would have to climb both fences and would probably be spotted by the guard

WHERE TWO ESCAPED—Iron bars have been put on the ventilator in the death house, through which prisoners Medley and McFarland made their escape. The death house is no longer used for condemned prisoners

TAMPER-PROOF WINDOWS—Guard Frank Lewis opens one of the ventilating panes in the new barred windows which have been installed throughout the jail. Steel in the window is tool proof, and cannot be cut with a hacksaw. There hasn't been a single break this year

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

The District Jail isn't the "Grand Hotel" it used to be.

Two years ago today five men sawed their way to freedom through the bars—starting a series of jail breaks which led to a congressional investigation and a new penal system for the District.

A visit yesterday by a reporter of The Washington Post revealed that the jail is not the same inside or out.

Changes have been made, from the administration down to the construction. Donald Clemmer, director of the new Department of Corrections, in his annual report was able to boast that for the first time in its history, the jail has had no escape for a whole year.

261,000 Improvements

Utilizing $261,000 granted by Congress to improve security, Clemmer has carried out recommendations made by the Hebert Congressional Committe and the Rover Committee.

Some of the recommendations are still in the process of being put into effect, but Clemmer estimates that within six months the full program will have been completed.

Changes within the jail start with administration:

1. A new superintendent, Col. Curtis Reid, and a new assistant superintendent, veteran Penologist Sam Anderson, are on the job. There are 64 new positions, 57 of which are for guards.

The guards, attracted by an increased pay scale and a five-day week, are for the most part World War II veterans. They undergo a rigid indoctrination course and a probationar- period.

2. There is more office personnel, so prisoners who formerly had access to confidential files no longer hold such clerical jobs.

3. One of the four death cells has been abandoned to save manpower. Guarding the death cells required eight guards to watch four prisoners. Instead, condemned men (there are now 11) are placed in a special tier requiring only three extra guards.

4. A new program is in operation on questions of discipline, recreation, medical aid, cleanliness and palatability and sufficiency of food.

5. Granting special privileges to juvenile prisoners has been stopped. Although kept in a special tier and fed separately from other inmates, the juveniles are treated as regular prisoners and are required to live in cells and participate in work details.

New construction within the jail is under way:

1. New corridors are being built to eliminate hazards of taking prisoners through winding staircases and halls in order to get them from one part of the jail to another.

2. A master control center, known as "the island," where a jail official will be stationed 24 hours a day, has been installed. The official will be able to operate electrically controlled doors and gates after contacting guards in the various parts of the jail by use of a loudspeaker system.

3. A new receiving room through which all prisoners must enter, be examined, given prison garb and be assigned to a cell has been set up.

Should a prisoner evade the interior escape barriers, he would face a new series of obstacles outside.

Bars Tougher Now

The five prisoners who made their escape on November 24, 1945, cut their way out with a hacksaw and scaled a 5-foot wire fence. Later two prisoners escaped on December 3, 1945, by cutting through window bars with a table knife.

Now new steel windows are being installed, replacing the soft metal bars. Bars are made of tool proof steel, which cannot be cut by hacksaw.

However, even if a prisoner could cut the bars, he would have to eliminate four of them in order to get out of the window due to the special construction.

Theoretically, if a prisoner got through a window, he would still have to scale two new barbed-wire fences—one 10 feet high and one 12 feet high, set 12 feet apart. These replace the old 5-foot fence.

A third precautionary measure is the new 30-foot towers manned by guards and searchlights which would spot the escaping prisoners, either when they were cutting through the bars or while they were attempting to scale the fences.

To prevent the smuggling in of tools or weapons, authorities have also taken precautionary measures.

1. An "inspectoscope" has been purchased at a cost of $3000, through which each prisoner will be viewed as he enters the jail. This instrument is so powerful that the number of bills in a prisoner's jacket could be counted through it.

2. A system has been adopted whereby friends or relatives visiting inmates have no opportunity to actually reach them. (Saws used in the November 24, 1945, break were smuggled in by the wife of an inmate.)

The prison administration won't go on record as saying it is impossible to escape from the District Jail, but they do say it is going to be a mighty hard job.

Mayor Sorry, Hopes Beatty Will Stay On

Hyattsville Head Will Apologize To City Attorney

Mayor Caesar L. Aiello of Hyattsville, Md., said last night the apparent slight which provoked the resignation of City Counsel W. Carroll Beatty was a "pure misunderstanding."

Beatty resigned as city attorney after he attended a meeting Thursday of the Prince Georges County Liquor Board to present the "unanimous" opposition of the city council to a beer license for the National Guard Armory at Hyattsville, only to be faced with a petition bearing names of the mayor and four councilmen favoring the license.

Mayor Aiello said he signed the petition "months ago." before he became mayor, at the request of friends in the Guard. When the matter came before the city council last week he said he did not connect the issue with the petition he had signed. Council, he said, voted to oppose the license because it appeared a large number of residents were opposed to it.

"I can see that Mr. Beatty was embarrassed and I am extremely sorry," the mayor added. "He had a right to be indignant. If he feels we owe him an apology, I will be glad to offer it. In fact, I am going to write him and tell him so.

"As you know I have been a member of the Guard for years and I am an ardent supporter of it. Some months ago, some of the members of the local company told me they felt that obtaining a permit for sale of beer to older members would aid in creating a clubroom atmosphere and in promoting recruiting.

"I was glad to sign the petition as a private individual. When opposition appeared at the council meeting, I did not realize it was the same application and I, as well as other members of council, felt we should serve the wishes of the residents in opposing the sale of beer at the armory.

"I do not wish Mr. Beatty to sever his official relations with this council on a sour note. He has been gracious enough to remain and aid us through these early months even though he asked to be relieved as counsel months ago. He finally agreed to remain until the first of the year and I hope he reconsiders his request for immediate action."

The mayor said he believed the Guard will withdraw the application.

Mrs. Irene Dolgos, 6513 Allegany ave., Takoma Park, Md., a night clerk at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, has seen plenty of anxious husbands who won't take no when they want to visit their wives at the hospital.

Saturday night, however, she met one with a little too much determination. She reported to police that when she told a visitor at 10 p. m. it was too late for him to see his wife, who was a patient, he pulled out a gun, pointed it at her, and suggested, "Maybe this will make you let one see her."

"The answer is still no," the spunky night clerk said she informed him.

About that time two other persons entered the hospital door, Mrs. Douglas said, and the man turned and departed without seeing his wife.

Marlboro Policemen J. W. Vincent and J. P. Kearns later arrested George Johnson, 2310 Booker rd., Silver Spring, at his home. He was held in lieu of $5000 bond on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Club officials said nothing other than the cash register had been taken. The charity fund, in a separate compartment of the register, represented donations of club members toward the purchase of milk for pupils attending St. Mary's Parochial School.

Md. Unveils Old Tax

Maryland tax officials have begun a campaign to enforce a State license tax law that, for unexplained reasons, has been overlooked for 31 years.

The measure, imposing a $15 annual license fee on all construction firms doing more than $5000 worth of business a year, was adopted in 1916 but was not enforced until it was discovered recently by William J. Muth, vice president of the Baltimore City Council. His discovery led to an active campaign by the State License Bureau to collect the tax.

A ruling by Attorney General Hall Hammond that a four-year limitation period applies to the statute exempts all licensees from taxes prior to 1944, city officials said. However, firms eligible to pay the tax also are liable to penalties amounting to 10 per cent for each month of delinquency.

Negro Doctors May Intern At Gallinger

Proposals to open Gallinger Hospital to the training of Negro medical students have been given the active support of the Federal Security Agency.

The agency, responsible for the administration of Howard University and Freedmen's Hospital, has taken the initiative in the matter with the tacit approval of President Truman and the direct recommendation of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

Formal negotiations between FSA Administrator Oscar R. Ewing and the District Commissioners await only the results of a conference between Hospital Superintendent Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney and Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean of Howard University's medical school. Such a conference is being arranged for early this week, Ewing said.

Negro Doctors Needed

Gallinger Hospital, where the patient load is estimated at 70 per cent Negro, is currently used for teaching purposes by George Washington and Georgetown medical schools. A similar relationship exists between Freedmen's Hospital and Howard University, but Freedmen's has but one third the number of patients.

Ewing said yesterday that "one of the most pressing problems" that confronted him when he took over as FSA chief last August was "the appalling shortage of Negro doctors" throughout the country.

He said he conferred with President Truman on the fact and was instructed "to take all possible measures" to eliminate the shortage. In many sections of the country, Ewing said, there are insufficient white doctors to take care of the white population and no Negro physicians for the Negroes.

"We just have to find the means of increasing the Nation's supply of Negro doctors," he declared.

Howard Trains Nearly 50%

Ewing pointed out that Howard University already trains nearly half the country's Negro doctors. It is restricted from training even more by the limitations of Freedman's Hospital but could double its output if its students could train at Gallinger, he said.

Ewing said he discussed the matter informally with District Commissioners earlier this month and found the Commissioners "perfectly willing to sit down with us and talk this thing over."

Howard officials, Ewing said, will limit their requests to those services in which they are ready and able to participate in at Gallinger. One of the objections to the proposal in the past has been that Howard lacks sufficient qualified doctors to oversee such a training program.

Expansion of Howard University through the use of Gallinger Hospital is but one phase of a program being pushed by FSA to increase the output of Negro physicians, Ewing said. The agency is also seeking widespread establishment of medical school scholarships for Negroes and expansion of Meharry Medical School, in Nashville, Tenn., second largest source of Negro doctors.

Transit Firm To Tell Reason For Fare Hike

Capital Transit Co. officials will meet with officials of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation tomorrow to explain proposals for higher fares in Maryland now pending before the Public Service Commission.

The meeting will be held at 8 p. m. in the Washington Gas Light Co. office in Hyattsville and will follow the same lines as a similar meeting held Friday night with representatives of other organizations in the county.

At that meeting E. C. Giddings, vice president of the transit company, and Dean J. Locke, staff engineer, explained the company position. The company wants a straight 5-cent fare for each 1½-mile zone, figured as the car or bus line operates and not as the crow flies, they said. Its application for higher fares will be heard December 3 at 10:30 a. m. in the Baltimore offices of the Maryland Public Service Commission.

Meanwhile, increased fare rates on carriers operated by the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines went into effect yesterday, after approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The line serves about 20,000 Washington area commuters. Commuters were informed of the new fares by posters displayed in all WM&A buses.

The company also has applied to the District Public Utilities Commission for an increase in cash fares in Washington from 10 to 15 cents, and in token fares, from 8½ to 12½ cents.

End of 'Passive Americanism' Urged by Allen

Baltimore, Nov. 23 (AP).—Harry S. Allen, State commander of the American Legion, urged Maryland post officers today to lead a "crusade to stamp out un-American philosophies."

In a speech at the annual conference of post commanders and adjutants, Allen said "the day of passive Americanism is gone."

"Proof has been well established," he said, "that a considerable group of citizenry, imbued with alien thinking, is attempting to bore from within, trying through foul means and outrageous falsification to raise confusion and discontent."

Brig. Gen. John Thomas Taylor, chairman of the American Legion legislative commission, described the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing program as "mere slum clearance, and asserted the legion's own "1948 homestead bill" would be an "effective answer" to housing needs of veterans.

Music Fete Books Detroit Orchestra

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—The Detroit Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Karl Kreuger, will play at the Virginia Music Festival in Charlottesville next spring, Mrs. Randolph Catlin, president of the Virginia Music Festival, Inc., said today.

This series of symphony concerts, held for the first time last June, is scheduled in 1948 for the weekend of May 21, 22 and 23, in order to give students from Virginia schools and colleges an opportunity to attend.

At the opening concert on Friday evening, it is planned to have a large choral group, chosen from college glee clubs in Virginia, sing with the orchestra. There will also be a soloist.

On Saturday afternoon the festival will offer, as an additional feature this year, a concert especially for children.

The Saturday evening concert will present a program of symphonic music chosen for its permanent value and wide popular appeal.

"The music festival would welcome, from its members and many friends, an expression of their choice for selections on the programs this season," Mrs. Catlin said. "They may be mailed to P. O. Box 283, Charlottesville."

The final concert of the series will be held on Sunday afternoon, May 23, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Weather permitting, all concerts will be given in Scott Stadium, where the orchestra shell, erected last season at a cost of $10,000, provides perfect acoustics, Mrs. Catlin said. In the event of bad weather, the concerts will be given in the University of Virginia gymnasium. For this reason, the advance sale of reserved seats will be limited to the seating capacity of the gymnasium, approximately 3000.

ARCHBISHOP RYAN

Archbishop Ryan Dies

American Medical Association's recognition of birth control as a proper medical practice and warned birth control would result in the gradual but certain extinction of the American people.

In 1936 he rebuked Father Charles E. Coughlin for describing President Roosevelt as "anti-God." He did not hesitate to take a stand against state medicine, which he called "Hitlerized medicine."

Urged War Preparation

In 1940, when many voices were raised against "war-mongers," the bishop told Creighton University seniors "this Nation must prepare itself now and not tomorrow to meet its destiny, no matter what that destiny may be."

A few days later he joined other church leaders in indorsing military conscription—then a highly controversial proposal.

Many persons disagreed with the stands he took, but all admired the forthrightness and earnestness of the big, informal prelate.

A crowd of 3500 greeted his stocky red-robed figure November 20, 1935, as he arrived to take over his Omaha charge.

It was his first working diocese, although he was named titular bishop of Modra in 1933. Modra is an inactive see in Asia Minor about 25 miles from Constantinople. He had never seen Modra but understood "there's nothing there now but a couple of tents."

Works Out In Gym

One of the first things he wanted to know was if a gymnasium would be conveniently nearby. The blocky prelate said "If I don't work out in a gymnasium, I can't keep down my weight."

Omahans found him a gymnasium, and also presented him a home later where he could raise roses, one of his principal hobbies. One year he had 500 bushes of roses. He gave them away by the bushel.

Other hobbies were deep-sea fishing and following football.

The largest assemblage of Catholic hierarchay in Omaha's history, including 9 archbishops and 47 bishops, witnessed the ceremony, thousands of years old, by which he was installed in 1935 as Bishop of Omaha. Archbishop Francis J. L. Beckman, the installing prelate, praised the new bishop as an educator, as "a young man in full vigor," and as one capable of "heroic leadership."

Moved by Ceremony

His enthronement as archbishop October 10, 1945, found the heavy-jawed prelate visibly moved. This ceremony also brought hosts of Catholic officials to Omaha for a colorful ceremony centuries old.

The ceremony also meant, of course, that the Diocese of Omaha was raised to an archdiocese, endingits six-year identification with the Province of Dubuque, Iowa.

The Military Figures In Day's Party Events

By Marie McNair

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Richard Cutts entertained at another in a series of luncheons yesterday at their home at The Plains, with a number of their Washington friends motoring down through the Virginia countryside to join them.

Closer to home there was the cocktail party given by Mrs. Robert Olds at her home on Woodland Drive; the small and informal fete for Col. David Terrazas, Chief of taff of the Bolivian Army, at the home of the Military Attache of the Bolivian Embassy and Senora de Sanchez; and also at the cocktail hour, a party at which the Walker Buels were hosts to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henle who were celebrating their fifteenth wedding anniversary yesterday.

On Sunday's crowded calendar, there was a luncheon for Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, who'll retire January 1 as Commandant of the Marine Corps, with Mrs. Vandegrift sharing honors, given by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William E. Riley. And one party followed another for a pretty bride-to-be, Miss Nancy Lee Laws, daughter of Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. Nancy, who will become the bride of Frank H. Rowe, jr., on Saturday, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Miss Elizabeth Kline at her home in Chevy Chase and then went on from there to Mrs. Robert Hoffman's home for a linen shower. Mrs. Hoffman is to be a bridesmaid.

Four Star Guests

At General and Mrs. Riley's luncheon for General and Mrs. Vandegrift, other guests were Gen. and Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Franklin Hart, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clifton Cates—he'll succeed General Vandegrift as commandant; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Field Harris, Brig. Gen. L. D. Hermle, Brig. Gen. Robert Blake and Col. and Mrs. Donald Curtis.

Guests asked in honor of the bride-elect were her sister, Miss Leita Laws, Miss Mary Allen Trimble, Miss Elaine Trimble, Mrs. George C. Clarke, jr., Miss June Gordon, Miss Anne Coe, Mrs. William Dexter, Mrs. Royal Hatch of Birmingham, Ala., who'll be a bridesmaid; Mrs. Roderick Brown of New York, the matron of honor, and Mrs. Peter Barrow of Richwood, W. Va., sister of the prospective bridegroom, who will also he in the wedding party.

TOWN TOPICS:

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, now in New York, will spend Thanksgiving weekend with their good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Young, at Fairholme, their Newport villa. The Youngs will entertain at dinner for their guests Saturday evening. The royal pair have leased the house of M. and Mrs. Alber Wadsworth of London, on South Ocean Boulevard, Paul Beach, for the winter season.

Househunting is one of the reasons that Marye Thomas has been spending so much time in New York. Her fiance, Jesse Spalding 3d, is the other. They've finally found an apartment on Gramercy Park, where they'll live following their marriage here on January 10.

Mrs. Virginia Jenckes, former Congresswoman from Indiana, is directing much of her relief work to the Austrian Children. She spends every spare minute knitting booties, bonnets and mittens, and all from scraps of yarn donated by friends. In Austria there's been no heat in the houses since before the war, consequently babies sleep in a helmet type headgear which exposes only eyes, nose and mouth.

Pretty Hilda Vallarino, daughter of Dr. J. J. Vallarino, former Ambassador of Panama who's a presidential candidate now, figures she has enough invitations from Washington friends to stay on for another year. And when Mrs. Robert Guggenheim heard that she promptly added her name to the list of those who want to keep Hilda here. However, she's expected to leave with her mother about the first of the year for Panama where Dr. Vallarino is already mapping out his campaign.

On a Western trip is Mrs. Jouett Shouse who accompanied Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, executive director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee. They're in Los Angeles now and won't be back until about December 8.

Cold Weather Brings Change In Infant's Diet

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Now that we can count upon cold weather, it is possible to make some changes in the child's routine that would have been undesirable when it was hot.

Up to baby's eighth or ninth month—and especially in summer—all drinking water should be boiled. But, after this age it can be taken straight from the faucet, provided of course your drinking water comes from a clean source and is protected against infectious materials.

The water need not be warmed, unless baby likes it this way. It should never be iced. Just serve it cool as it comes from the ordinary, kitchen faucet.

When the baby begins to drink from a cup, the mother is sure to wonder whether she needs to go through the ceremony of preparing a formula. If the baby still takes a diluted formula, containing some sugar, the formula should be prepared as usual. This need not be stored in separate bottles as formerly, but may be poured into one large, sterilized, glass jar and poured from there into a clean saucepan for warming.

Some babies like their milk warmed even though it is served by cup. Others show a very marked distaste for warm milk unless it is flowing from a bottle nipple. There is no harm after the baby is one year of age, to give cool Warm milk is more soothing and milk at the end of a warm meal. certainly at nap and bedtimes it might be better, if the baby wants it, to continue to warm the milk given then.

So long as bottles are used, even if there be only one or two a day, they must be dealt with exactly as if the baby were on all bottles. Wash them well with soap suds, rinse and boil or sterilize in the electric sterilizer. When milk is put on ice in any container it should be a sterilized one, so that germs in the milk itself or on the container would not be encouraged to multiply. The same treatment should be given the nipples used in feeding. These are not useless ceremonies, but should be continued as long as the baby takes his food by bottle, regardless of his age.

Oil Routine Keeps Machine Ready to Sew

By Vivian Brown

Fashion changes may keep American women glued to their sewing machines until they've let down their hems and put a few new garments into their wardrobes.

Wintertime is sewing time even if Mrs. Housewife isn't fashion conscious. There are always junior's threadbare trousers to be patched, slipcovers, drapes and towels to be made, and the trusty old sewing machine really gets a whirl.

The workmanlike home sewer, whose machine whirs smoothly, keeps an oil can handy and uses it after each day's work, say household equipment specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Use Household Oil

For oiling, use household machine oil, the kind that is packaged by gasoline companies or manufacturers of sewing machines, the specialists advise. A drop of the oil should be squirted in each oil opening and each bearing—on any surface which rubs against another. The little block of felt or ball of wool that feeds oil to the shuttle race should be oiled. If there is no felt or wool, take a cloth, wrap it around your finger and wipe a thin film of oil on the race. Never oil the tensions of the machine.

You don't have to flood your sewing machine with oil. In routine oiling a drop is plenty. Excess oil runs off and is wasted and excess oil which is not wiped off collects dust. Too much oil on the shuttle race of needle may cause stitches to skip. After you have oiled the machine, run the machine a minute or two to work the oil into bearings.

Dust Needle Plate

Household specialists also advise that it is a smart idea to slide out the needle plate occasionally and blow away any lint under it, or to remove the lint with a dry brush. The needle plate is one of the worst lint catchers on the machine and may cause sewing to become much harder work when lint and dirt pack down.

The sewing machine should always be covered when not in use to protect it from dust. If you will let the presser foot down on a scrap of cloth it will help the tension to stay at the proper adjustment and also take up any excess oil that may run down the needle bar.

Even when the machine isn't in use it should be oiled. If it is left idle for a considerable time, occasional oiling will help to keep it from drying and becoming gummy.

It would be nice if every apartment, house or bungalow came equipped with a sewing room. Not only would there be more home sewing done but a room planned for that purpose would make sewing lighter work. In a sewing room you can keep all the little things you need to do a good sewing job and you don't have to stash them away when company arrives—making it an easier proposition to resume your sewing when your guests depart.

Your Questions on Homemaking

Recently I bought a package of color remover to use in bleaching my white silks and rayons, but I notice that the instructions say to use it only on Bemberg and viscose rayons, not on celanese and acetate. Puzzle: How do I know which is which, and what happens if I make a mistake? B. W. A.

There are three kinds of rayons: viscose, cuprammonium and acetate. The first two react as cotton in washing and ironing, but acetate rayons melt with too much heat, also react unfavorable in dye solutions. The rayon materials which stick to a too hot iron are acetate. Since acetate rayons are so different chemically from viscose and cuprammonium, they should always be labeled "acetate rayons" when they are sold, but unfortunately many of them are not. Bemberg is a trade name for a cuprammonium rayon. Celanese is an acetate rayon.

To determine which type of rayon you are dealing with, here is a simple test. Remove a small piece from a seam or hem and burn it. Viscose and cuprammonium ignite readily and burn with yellow flame much the same as cotton. The odor is like burning wood and a slightly charred edge remains. Acetate rayons burn with a smaller, bluer flame, puckers and curls as it melts, leaving a hard shiny globular mass. If you don't get a decisive result from the burning test, it probably means that there is one kind of thread running one way of the material and a different kind running the other way. Separate the threads and try the burning test on each. If you find two fibers in one piece of material, it is not wise to try to dye it, for they will probably take the dye differently. If you wish a more complete discussion of this subject, see "The American Women's Complete Sewing Book" by Ida Riley Duncan, published by Liveright Publishing Corp., New York. You will also find in this book the more common trade names for each type of rayon.

How would you keep a white crepe dress from turning yellow? V. F.

To prevent a silk crepe dress from yellowing put bluing in each water in which it is washed and hang it to dry in the shade, preferably in the dark.

Please let me know what can be done about squeaky chairs. We have two comfortable rocking chairs, and every blessed member of our family seeks them out. But they squeak. Is there any remedy?

Squeaking in chairs is due possibly to loose joints. The first step in eliminating the squeak is to locate the offending joint, or joints; then you deal with it in several ways. Sometimes pouring melted paraffin into the joint will stop the squeak. If the joint is so loose that it can be taken apart, place a piece of silk stocking over the hole in such a position that in fitting in the joint the fabric will be forced into the hole. Trim off the extra part with a razor blade. Or, when you have the joint apart, clean out the old glue and reglue, using a good quality liquid glue. Both parts of the joint should be covered with glue, the parts returned to position and then tied with a cord to hold it in position until the glue has dried. In the case of a platform rocker, the squeak may be in the spring. The most you can do to eliminate a squeak from this source is to squirt oil in every spot where one piece of the metal touches another.

Do you know how or where I can locate some tableware made of one of the newer metals? I have forgotten both the name and the source. It is a pale gold-bronze in color and is, I think, called "Dirilyte" or some such name. E. A. T.

You are evidently correct in your recollection of the name of this metal, for "Dirilyte" tableware that fits your description is on sale here. You'll find it in the silverware section of Woodward and Lothrop. It's a Swiss metal that wears and polishes well, just as silver does, and is less expensive than silver.

I should like to paint some small tin milk cans and measures black, then either paint colored designs on them or use decals. I have seen some in antique shops that do not look "shiny black". Could you tell me what is used to give them that sooty, dull black finish? If lamp black is used, could you tell me where it may be purchased and how it is used. J. K. G.

A friend who paints beautiful articles of this type tells me that dull black paint, sold in most paint stores, is the thing to use. (One such paint is made by Vantine, another by Dupont.) She usually applies a coat of clear lacquer to the article first, then after that is well dried, uses the dull paint. She says letting all finishes dry thoroughly is one of the secrets of doing a good job when painting such articles.

Can you tell me how to remove a glass stopper from a perfume bottle which I have never been able to open? M. T.

If you gently warm the neck of the bottle, causing it to expand, the stopper may be loosened. If you can warm it to just the right degree by letting lukewarm water run over it (so that the outer ring of glass expands but not the glass stopper) you should be able to work it loose. Or take a stout string, tie one end to something firm, wrap it around the neck of the bottle several times, and pull it tight with one hand while you move the bottle back and forth with the other. The friction of the string against the glass provides the heat.

Can you tell me a solution to use to take away the shine caused by pressing on dresses? H. T.

Sponging with a vinegar and water solution helps remove the shine from many types of material, especially woolens. A good airing is then necessary to get rid of the vinegar smell. However, in cases where shine on acetate rayon is made by a slight melting of the material when too hot an iron is used, it's just about impossible to remove it.

I have a hand tailored rayon lamp shade in a color too dark (deep tan) to blend with an ox-blood Chinese base I want to use. Is there anyway I can safely bleach it to a lighter shade—a pale beige or even white would be much more attractive. H. E.

There are commercial bleaches on the market now that can be used on rayon, but I'm afraid bleaching a lamp shade smoothly with one of these would be an impossible job. How about covering the shade with white rayon, over the deep tan? It would be easier than taking off the old material and recovering it entirely, and the shade would look a lighter tan when lit and white when unlit.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widower's Fiancee, a Spinster, Deplores His Daughter's Demand for Costly Flubdub When She, the Daughter, Weds in December

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a single woman, 43, and engaged to be married to a widower the same age who has two daughters, 15 and 19 years old. He and I have similar backgrounds and many interests in common. We get along fine except for one thing.

His elder daughter is getting married next month and she tells her father it is his duty as a parent to give her a wedding gown and all that goes with it, as well as a bridal dinner and reception.

Man Was Lately Mired in Debt

SIX YEARS ago, when we met, my finance was $2000 in debt, due to his wife's eight years' illness preceding her death. Now all these debts are paid, he owns a good car and has nearly a thousand dollars saved.

Owing to the circumstances, we can't get married, and consequently I feel that he shouldn't be obligated to pay the daughter's wedding expenses. What do you think? Please answer soon, as I want to take the right attitude, which will decide my own future, too.

S. P.

Seems Spinster Voices Delusion

DEAR S. P.: In speaking of yourself as being engaged to marry this man, I believe you are voicing a delusion of sorts.

In all probability you are taking for granted that he will marry you eventually, and perhaps he hasn't discouraged this idea pointblank. Indeed he may tacitly encourage the theory that you and he are "intended" helpmeets; and possibly you have already, for several years, played this role in relation to him, in all but married name.

However, the fact that you are still in suspense after six years acquaintanceship, and that his daughter's current demand for parental outlay on her wedding is being construed as the latest obstacle to legal union, suggests that your so-called fiance habitually finds one excuse after another to sidestep that ceremony you're counting on.

If at any time during the last six years he were positively resolved to marry you, because convinced that your abiding companionship were a first necessity to his long-term contentment, he wouldn't be "acting out" the implication that he must pile up financial security before saying the word and tying the knot.

Man's Negativism Blocks Her Purpose

ON the contrary, he would have argued that with you as wife—to share his responsibilities and give him counsel, cheer and incentive—he could tackle his problems with redoubled vigor and twice-quickly overcome them. Which would have been true if he felt that way and if you were the right helpmeet for him.

In putting debt behind him, buying a good car and amassing savings while keeping you on the anxious seat, he unconsciously signifies that his interest in you has been only tentative and cautiously qualified to date. In brief, it isn't economic circumstance but rather his negative reaction that stalls off marriage. So much for your frustrated hopes.

As for the girl's insistence that he has a duty to finance her wedding, according to traditional social usage, she's right. Proper parents need no prompting to accept that obligation; although of course they are entitled to settle for modest finery and a simple ceremony, sans feasting and reception, if their means are small.

Royal Jewels Given Bride

While press dispatches from London give the merest listing of jewelry which the Princess Elizabeth has received for her nuptials to Lieutenant Mountbatten, each object is rich in royal romance and historic sentiment.

The diamond tiara and earrings passed on to the Princess by her grandmother, Queen Mary, were given to the then Princess Mary of Teck to be worn at her own wedding to George V. She wore the tiara over her mother's wedding veil and tucked into the front of her hair pieces of myrtle, white heather and orange blossoms. These three flowers represented good luck from Wales, Scotland and England respectively.

The so-called "Strathmore Diamonds" which Queen Elizabeth is passing on to her daughter were her own wedding gift from her late father, the Earl of Strathmore. The principal piece is a lovely hair-bandeau of five diamond roses representing the Rose of York, mounted so they can be worn separately as bodice decorations. Another object in this series is a diamond chain with diamond-and-pearl pendant.

Each royal bride has had her favorite combination in jewels. Queen Victoria favored diamonds and turquoise set in yellow gold, and these jewels came down to Queen Elizabeth on her wedding day from her future father-in-law, George V.

Most important single gem in her collection, however, is probably the 54-carat diamond given to her by Dr. John Williamson, famed African mining engineer. Incidentally he is reputed to be the world's richest bachelor. This is a larger stone than the historic Eugenie diamond given to the Empress of the French on a necklace as her wedding gift from Napoleon III.

Tomorrow's Peace Plate

A Peace Plate omelet is tomorrow's dish for Meatless Tuesday. The menu suggested by Citizens Food Committee is:

Cheese Omelet with Spanish Sauce
Buttered Brussels Sprouts or Broccoli
Split Muffins spread with Butter, Celery Salt and Toasted
Apple Dumplings

CHEESE OMELET WITH SPANISH SAUCE

1½ tablespoons fat	1/3 cup milk
6 eggs	Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon salt	1/3 cup grated American cheese

Heat the fat in a skillet; then tip the skillet to grease the sides and bottom. Beat the eggs, just enough to blend the yolks and whites. Add the salt, milk, and pepper, and beat thoroughly. Pour into the skillet and cook over low heat until a film of cooked egg has formed on the bottom of the pan. Lift the edge of this cooked egg and tilt the pan so that the uncooked portion runs under the raised cooked portion. Sprinkle cheese over omelet. Again cook until a film of cooked egg forms, then repeat the lifting and cooking process until the entire mixture is cooked and golden brown on the bottom—this process will take about 10 minutes. Then loosen the omelet with a spatula, fold from handle of skillet to opposite side of pan. Or roll jelly roll fashion, and turn onto a warm platter. Serves 4. Serve Spanish Sauce as a filling or over omelet.

Try Vegetables for Decor

All the color that is traditionally associated with the celebration of Thanksgiving Day can adorn your festive table—and it won't cost you a penny.

In the Thanksgiving tradition, your holiday table can reflect the spirit of harvest abundance, according to the November issue of Good Housekeeping magazine, which states in part:

"A vegetable bin supplies the simple appointments, rivaling the color of any floral bouquet.

"A hollowed lemon is filled with feathery escarole, glossy dark cabbage leaves topped by flaming carrots, with shiny red radishes tucked in at the sides.

"This is banked by snowy cauliflower, squash, purple onions, and tomatoes—a riot of color, with china and glass on a cloth of huge red checks.

"Your centerpiece may look extravagant, but it's really tomorrow's dinner."

Shortening for Pie Making

Don't use shortening that is not absoluted fresh for pastry. The least little rancid taste will ruin your baking. Render it sweet again and then use this fat for frying and buy fresh for pie-baking.

Saturday Set as Hearing Date By Greenbelt Investigators

A nine-man Greenbelt (Md.) investigating committee will consider charges against two town officials at a public hearing at 9 a. m. Saturday in the center school at Greenbelt, Mayor Thomas J. Canning announced yesterday.

The hearing, which stems from a general inquiring into the town's administration authorized last September, will be confined to charges formally filed with the investigating committee prior to an October 10 deadline set by the town council, Canning said. The council called for written complaints against "any and all town officials."

Two Officials Named

The only official named in written complaints were Town Manager James T. Gobbel, accused of "mismanaging" the town's finances by paying salaries in excess of amounts authorized in the budget, and Police Chief George Panagoulis, accused of dereliction of duty by a former town policeman whose dismissal created a local controversy.

The investigating committee, composed of the five town council members and four other local residents, has not specified the nature of the charges filed against the police chief. The accusations against Gobbel, however, have been publicly discussed at several recent meetings of the town council.

Although the hearing will be open to the public, Mayor Canning emphasized that the committee would hear only those persons who have signed written complaints against the two officials and their sworn witnesses. No other complaints will be discussed, and spectators will not be given an opportunity to "interfere" with the proceedings, he added.

Ample Time, Says Mayor

Mayor Canning pointed out that the council, in setting the October deadline for presentation of formal complaints, gave residents of the community ample time in which to list their grievances.

The administrative investigation was touched off last August in a series of preelection incidents, in which George Bauer, former mayor, accused Gobbel of mismanaging the town's affairs. Bauer, who at the time was seeking reelection, later withdrew from the race so that he would be "free of political implications" in pressing his charges against the town manager.

Mayor Canning said the investigating committee had decided to hold the hearing on a Saturday because it "possibly" might last all day, and most residents of Greenbelt are Government employes and have the day off.

Mexico Leader Helping Reds, Green Says

By the United Press

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor yesterday extended his trades union campaign against Soviet Russia to Latin America, and charged that Mexican labor leader Vincente Lombardo Toledano is trying to entice Latin-American workers into the Communist camp.

On the heels of his announcement that labor leaders of the 16 western European Marshall Plan nations would meet in Paris to organize against Communist encroachment, Green named an AFL delegation to a January 10 conference at Lima, Peru, called to form a Western Hemisphere Labor Federation.

He accused Toledano, head of the Latin-American Confederation of Labor, of "smearing the United States throughout South and Central America and trying to lure the workers of our neighboring countries into the Communist camp."

Green called Toledano "the foremost spokesman for Moscow in this hemisphere." He charged that the Mexican labor leader had used the Latin-American Confederation to issue "a constant barrage of propaganda accusing the United States of imperialism" from 1939 until Germany attacked Russia in 1941.

2 Milion Veterans Still Eligible for VA Job Training

About two million World War II veterans who discontinued school or job training courses are still eligible for further training, the Veterans Administration announced yesterday.

They are among the 4,670,000 veterans who started training under the GI Bill of Rights or the Vocational Rehabilitation Act since the program began, but were no longer in training on October 31, 1947.

Only 29,000 of the 2,013,000 veterans who discontinued training are not eligible for additional benefits, said VA. Of these, 26,000 are disabled veterans declared rehabilitated, and the rest GI trainees who used all their credits.

Siam Reform Chief to Oust 'Free' Army

Bangkok, Siam, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Premier Khuang Aphaiwong of the new Siamese reform government said today one of his first tasks would be to disarm the Free Thai army, organized and armed by the United States and Britain during the war to fight the Japanese.

The task will be carried out by Field Marshal Luang Phibun Songgram, leader of the army coup d'etat which set up the reform government, Aphaiwong said. The Premier insisted Songgram is the only man in Siam strong enough to disarm the Free Thai army.

Aphaiwong apologized for keeping Songgram in the government and said he knew the world was prejudiced against Songgram because he served as the puppet Premier of Siam under the Japanese. However, he said, Siam needs Songgram's strength for internal safety.

He promised he soon would demote Songgram from supreme commander of all armed forces to army commander.

He said he could not dispense entirely with Songgram's services even though he realized many nations would not recognize the reform government as long as Songgram was connected with it.

"What the world does not realize is that Siam has two armies," Aphaiwong said in an interview.

"I blame the United States and Britain for this because they armed the Free Thai army to fight the Japanese. There is nothing wrong in that in itself, but the government of (former Premier) Nai Pridi (Banomyong) refused to disarm the Free Thais, instead using them as a private army."

2 Men Held, 3d Sought in Virginia Rape

South Boston, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Two Negro men were in Halifax County jail tonight and a posse of between 200 and 300 South Boston and Halifax residents was hunting for a third—all three charged with the rape of two white girls last night and the highway robbery of the young women and their dates.

State Trooper C. T. Coates said the two already apprehended were George Brooks, 21, a farmer, and Herman Whitt, 15, a day laborer, both of Halifax County. Both admitted robbing the two couples on Beacon Light lot atop a hill two miles south of here and raping the young women, Coates said.

Being sought is Major Brooks, 27, a farmer and cousin of George Brooks. This third man, Coates said, was sighted in the densely wooded area about 7 tonight, but eluded the posse and threw bloodhounds off his trail.

The State trooper said the two couples stopped their car about 10 p. m. and the Negroes—all masked—approached the vehicle from both sides.

One flourished a toy pistol, another a shotgun and the third a dagger. After robbing the four of $12, Coates said the Negroes forced the young people to drive about three miles through the sparsely settled section. The young men were ordered from the car and the girls taken further into the woods, where they were raped, Trooper Coates said.

One on the Aisle—

This 'Green' Means Go

Unique Detective Arrives at Hipp

By Richard L. Coe

THOSE BRIGHT CHAPPIES who concocted "The Lady Vanishes," "Night Train" and "The Adventuress" have come up with another highly diverting mystery at the Hippodrome, "Green for Danger."

Besides being an above average who-dun-it-n-why, "Green for Danger" offers a refreshingly different detective, one Inspector Cockrill of Scotland Yard, wittily acted by Alastair Sim.

This fellow is quite unlike the brash smarties who so effortlessly come up with the right answers. Cockrill is effortless enough, as he himself admits, but he rather muffs the ball in this case. Not quite, understand, but enough to save him from the maddening omniscience of fictional detectives. There's not a jot of pomposity in his makeup and he's got a grand sense of the ridiculous.

He comes from a novel by Christiana Brand. Sidney Gilliat and Frank Launder, the producers, whose joint collaboration in various departments was so successful in those earlier pictures, have treated him well, holding off his arrival until the blood has dried.

Though the setting is wartime England, there's very little to do with espionage, which is too much of a clue to give you. Five people—two doctors and three nurses—appear to have done away with a hospital patient. Since he's a negligible character, despite his calling as a postman, and since his death hardly seems like murder, it takes sharp investigating to find out what has been going on.

Thus we have the good old British film technique of putting the camera on a microscopic situation. The hospital, one of those wartime make-do emergencies, has a gaunt air of reality about it. And the people are those nonfiction types the British do so well.

But Which Is Guilty?

The self-deprecating Inspector Cockrill makes you as certain as he is that one of the five is a steely-hearted killer. But which one? Leo Genn, soon to be seen in "Mourning Becomes Electra," is a surgeon whose Harley Street days appear to have been filled with girls, girls, girls. Trevor Howard, as an anesthetic expert, has had the tough luck to be involved in a rum do before.

Of the nurses, you could suspect Sally Gray, who's romantically involved with both doctors. You could feel that Rosamund John is guilty for one of her alibis is clearly false. And you might suspect Megs Jenkins, for large, healthy girls have been known to do strange things.

Naturally one can go no further in detailing a mystery yarn. It took Miss Brand a book, so why should we try it in less and at the cost of spoiling the picture for you?

So we'll just leave it at that. Go into Messrs. Gilliat's and Launder's little hospital yourself and watch the diverting Inspector Cockrill at work. "Green for Danger" is exceptionally engrossing fun.

"GREEN FOR DANGER," J. Arthur Rank-Eagle Lion release produced by Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat. Screenplay by Gilliat and Claude Guerney from the novel by Christiana Brand. Directed by Gilliat. Music by the London Symphony under the direction of Muir Mathieson. At the Hippodrome.

THE ANGIE BOND TRIO, of the Capitol's stage, has a very active, if limited circle of admirers. It turns out that the little girl at the piano, Mariana Sarrica, is almost a Washingtonian and really began as a seriously classical pianist. She's played under Stokowski and was Grace Moore's accompanist at Constitution Hall for one of the late soprano's last appearances here. That background accounts for the Bach D minor on the girls' program. The Angie Bond of the title is the tall Greek lass at the bass fiddle. Tula, the accordianist, is Angie's sister.

LAST WEEK'S column about "This Is the Army" brought several interesting letters—one from an old TITA man who's here as leader-violinist with the Jack Morton orchestras, Joe Shifrin. Joe points out that the TITA orchestra has civilian graduates with Tex Beneke, Claude Thornhill, Johnny Long and half a dozen Broadway hits. And former WAC Bernice K. Johnson writes movingly of TITA's visit to New Guinea in late '44. There was an encore one night, Miss Johnson remarks, that brought tears to many eyes on far-off Oro Bay, when Irving Berlin and the crowd sang "White Christmas."

ALEXANDRIA'S Little Theater opens a three-night run tonight with "Squaring the Circle," that Soviet comedy of housing shortages. The players take over the George Washington High School auditorium for their run. Tomorrow night's performance is sponsored by the local Post 24 of the American Legion. For further information call TEmple 4102.

TOMORROW: In the final editions, Richard L. Coe reviews the National's revival of "The Firefly," which opens a week's visit tonight.

UPWA Local Right-Winger Faces Charges

An active member of the right wing faction of Local 3, United Public Workers of America, CIO, is scheduled to be charged with "conduct unbecoming a union member" at a meeting here tonight.

Right wing leaders allege this is another development, on a local level, in efforts to "intimidate" members of the UPWA's insurgent Build the Union Committee.

The BUC was formed here October 26 as a national group within the UPWA, planning to unseat present UPWA leaders for alleged left wing policies. The UPWA has termed the group "disgruntled office seekers . . . repudiated by the membership."

Miss Lois Carlisle, a State Department employe, faces trial tonight before the executive board of Local 3.

Accused of Threats

A former chief shop steward of the local's State Department branch, she is charged with seeking to prevent a potential candidate from running for a branch office "by threats," thereby "seeking to subvert the democratic processes."

According to Morton Liftin, a Labor Department attorney and her counsel, the incident on which the charges hinge took place two months ago, and related to her activities in opposing an individual's candidacy and in advising him of this oppostiion.

BUC officials said the State Department branch supported Miss Carlisle's position in a resolution two months ago. Liftin declared the executive board is not the proper trial tribunal, since it made the charges, and added:

Violation of Standards Charged

"The officers of Local 3 are acting in numerous respects in violation of standards for a fair hearing that the UPWA-CIO has frequently urged be adopted by Federal agencies."

Said Miss Margaret L. Plunkett, BUC public relations officer, "These accusations, and other recent activities directed at the BUC, bear all the earmarks of a calculated drive to silence democratic opposition within the union."

Officials of Local 3 were not available for comment last night. Tonight's meeting, limited to members of the local, is set for 8:15, at 718 5th st. nw.

Concordia Plaque Honors Dunkhorst

Eight hundred members of Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, 20th and G sts. nw., saw a plaque dedicated yesterday to Harry F. Dunkhorst, congregation president for 27 years.

The ceremony took place at the annual memorial service for members who died in the past year. Mr. Dunkhorst, however, died November 27, 1945.

Dr. Charles Enders, pastor, led the dedicatory service. He recalled that Mr. Dunkhorst was a member of Concordia Church 50 years, and had been active in local and national affairs of his denomination, frequently being delegate to church conferences.

"He was always ready to heed the call of his church," the pastor said of Mr. Dunkhorst. "He served his Lord and Master to the best of his knowledge and ability. He was an inspiration to all members of the church to give themselves to unstinting service in the work of the Lord."

After the roll-call of deceased members, the 800 worshipers stood to sing Mr. Dunkhorst's favorite hymn, "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," the first verse of which is engraved on the bronze plaque placed at the rear of the church.

Time to Order New Grapevines

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Virginia small fruit growers were advised today that now is the time to order young grapevines if they plan new plantings next spring.

Assistant Horticulturist R. C. Moore of Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station said Concord Blue and Niagara White are the most widely planted midseason varieties. Others on Moore's list include Portland or Ontario, early white grapes; Fredonia and Van Buren, early blue, and Sheridan Blue or Golden Muscat White, both late varieties.

Seneca, a new early white grape, shows promise for flavor, and will keep well on vines for considerable time after maturing, Moore said. Caco, a medium late red grape, he said, has high quality. He listed Ontario as suitable for colorless jelly or for colorless grape juice.

College Population in Virginia Due to Level Off at 35,000

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 23 (AP). By 1960, Virginia will have a "normal" college enrollment of approximately 35,000 students or about 50 per cent more than the peacetime peak of 1939-40, a study by John Littlepage Lancaster for the Bureau of Population and Economic Research at the University of Virginia states.

Before a normal growth in college population can be resumed, a flood of veterans will push total enrollment to a peak of approximately 43,500 next session, after which the veteran student ranks will decline to insignificance after 1953.

These predictions concerning what the next two decades hold for Virginia institutions are conclusions of the study of college enrollment made at the request of the director of the budget for Virginia.

If veterans of World War II were not taking advantage of college education benefits under the GI Bill of Rights, Virginia colleges and universities would now be entering a period of slackening enrollment following the 1939-1940 peak. That peak resulted from the high birth rate in the years immediately following World War II.

During depression years the birth rate dropped, then began picking up again in the late 1930's and early 1940's. From now until approximately 1955 colleges would normally be feeling the effects of the lower birth rate during the depression, but any "normal" losses in enrollment are being more than made up by the enrollment of veterans.

According to a survey made last year by the Veterans' Administration and utilized in the college enrollment study by Lancaster, Virginia has about 261,000 veterans. Some 23,000 of these either have entered college or are going to.

The wave of veteran enrollments began to be felt in 1945-1946, with 5366 former GI students. Next session an estimated 18,500 veterans will be enrolled. The veteran enrollment will peter out by 1953.

After 1954 there will be a pick-up in college and university attendance reflecting the increased birth-rate preceding and during World War II.

Christmas Seal Sale Opens Today

The District's forty-first annual Christmas Seal Sale, designed to raise $200,000 for the local fight against tuberculosis, begins today.

First batch of seals to arrive in Washington will be delivered to William E. Leahy, former director of Selective Service and chairman of the Washington Chest X-Ray Survey.

Pointing out that Christmas Seal funds will finance a considerable part of the forthcoming city-wide X-ray survey, Leahy urged District residents to be generous in their purchase of seals.

Residents will receive seals in their mail today and tomorrow, he said. The drive will continue until Christmas.

J. Austin Latimer, chairman of the Christmas Seal Sale Citizens Committee of the District Tuberculosis Association, pointed out that money raised through the sale will not be used to pay for treatment of indigent patients, but to extend the prevention and control program.

The funds, will help to finance the association's programs of rehabilitation in the four District tuberculosis hospitals, adult and school health education, public and professional information services, and research.

Ninety-five per cent of the funds raised locally will be used in the District, while 5 per cent will go to the national association.

Organ Dedication

Hancock, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—A new organ, replacing one donated by the late Andrew Carnegie and the late Robert Ferguson Bridges, will be dedicated November 30 at the Hancock Presbyterian Church—built in 1787 and one of the oldest Presbyterian churches in the South. The new instrument was donated by Henry P. Bridges.

IMPORTANT

Bills have been mailed to you for your annual State and county taxes. If you do not receive them, kindly notify the County Treasurer. If you have sold any real estate since January 1, return the bills for the same, together with the name and address of the present owner.

Payment should be made not later than December 5. Under the State law, a 5% penalty will be added to taxes remaining unpaid on December 6.

In accordance with the State Laws, all State and local taxes of every kind and description are assessed as of January 1, 1947, against all persons residing in Arlington County as of that date.

If your real estate taxes show an increase, this is due to the rate being raised from $3.00 to $3.25 on each one hundred dollars assessment. This is under the authority of the County Board.

Slot Machine Ballot Won't Affect Trials

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—A proposal to legalize slot machines in St. Marys County through a public referendum December 9 will not affect prosecution of 19 persons already facing trial on gambling indictments, it was learned here today.

Although the county commissioners have come out with an official indorsement of legalized gambling, State's Attorney C. Henry Camalier yesterday told The Washington Post he intended to proceed "as scheduled" with the prosecution of those indicted for violation of the existing law. He said the outcome of the special election would not affect his plans.

Trial in Montgomery

No trial dates have been set for the gambling cases, which were transferred to the Montgomery County Circuit as the result of a defense request for a change of venue, Camalier said. The defendants, mostly tavern operators, were indicted after a sweeping grand jury investigation of gambling last June.

The referendum on legalized gambling was authorized in a special bill enacted earlier this month by the Maryland Assembly, which approved the measure after it was indorsed by county officials. It provides for imposition of gross-receipts taxes, on all machines in the event their legal operation is approved by the voters.

To Keep Tax Rate Down

In a formal statement approving the referendum bill, the commissioners contended that legalized machines would yield a "substantial revenue to lessen the ever-increasing tax rate on real estate." If the gambling proposal fails, the statement said, the county is faced with a further increase in the tax rate.

The commissioners estimated that the gross receipts tax on slot machines would net the county a revenue of "not less than $100,000 annually."

Indorsement of the proposal to legalize the machines came after members of the St. Marys County Civic Association had charged that each of the commissioners was "personally interested in slot machines." The 400-member association has opposed slot machines since its organization about a year ago.

Communist Spy Ring Uncovered In Peiping

Nanking, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Government's Central News Agency asserted today a Communist spy ring was uncovered in Peiping in September, operating under cover of the executive headquarters set up by United States Secretary of State Marshall when he was here mediating in China's civil war.

The agency quoted a defense ministry spokesman as saying the chief Communist commissioner at executive headquarters left behind 20 ounces of gold to finance underground operations and a radio station when the headquarters were closed.

The agency added that members of the spy ring under arrest included some officers of the local defense corps at Paoting, capital of Hopeh Province, one member of the Peiping municipal government, and several Peiping school teachers.

Martinsburg Postal Aide to Retire

Assistant Postmaster Retiring At Martinsburg After 48 Years

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—After 48 years of service in a postoffice that he and his father aided in building, Harry C. Kitchen will retire next Sunday as assistant postmaster here. Tonight he was the guest of honor at an informal dinner arranged by associates and friends.

Kitchen retires on the basis of age—70—which he reached Wednesday. He entered the office as a clerk in 1899 and became assistant postmaster in 1909. His accumulated leave will run his technical association to April 28, although he will cease active duty next week.

He will be succeeded by Alfred D. Collins, who has been with the office since 1913. Postmaster Marlin S. Eckerd said Collins was advanced on the basis of seniority after two others outranking him on that basis had declined to take the office.

Kitchen is a native and life-long resident of Berkeley County. His father, the late Gilbert W. Kitchen, was a lumberman and supplied some of the heavy timbers in 1898 for the first postoffice erected here. The son helped on the contract. The postoffice remains today as it was built, except for additional room for parcel post and some interior alterations. The building houses Federal Court and other United States offices.

Kitchen has served under six postmasters—Alex Clohan, E. C. Henshaw and J. Frank Thompson, all now deceased, and J. William Kastle, Whiting C. Faulkner and the present postmaster, Eckert.

Kitchen today recalled that the office was doing a $10,000 annual business when he joined the staff. Today it is doing about $170,000 and has long been noted a first-class office. There were three members of the staff then, and 38 now.

When he began work, there were four rural delivery routes, covered by horse-drawn vehicles, and each carrier traveled about 18 miles a day. Today there are still four carriers, but they use automobiles and each covers about 60 miles a day.

Kitchen recalled that at the start he began at 7 a. m. and stayed until it was done—seven days a week. Pay then for a clerk was $300 a year. The job he is leaving pays $3900 a year.

He said retirement will give him the time for landscape gardening and travel for which he has long waited. He is in good health.

Kitchen has one son, Lieut. Col. Meade Kitchen, now with the Army of Occupation in Germany.

Fairlington Rent Hike to BeOpposed

The Fairlington Association, made up of tenants in the 3439-unit development, yesterday called a meeting for 8 p. m. Friday to protest a proposed 15-per-cent increase in rents.

The Fairmac Corporation of Dallas, Tex., which took over the apartment development from the Defense Homes Corporation in October, notified tenants of the proposed increase Saturday. A "stabilized rent and occupancy right through to the end of 1949, whether or not rent control continues" was offered those signing leases at the higher rental.

The purpose of Friday's meeting, Robert E. Reynolds, chairman of an association committee, said, is to inform the tenants of "their rights under the Federal Rent Act of 1947." The meeting, he said, will be held in Fairlington School.

Treason Trial Note Rejected By Romania

Bucharest, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Romanian government today rejected a United States note concerning the recent treason trials in Bucharest and attacked "foreign interference in the internal life of Romania."

The American note, delivered to the foreign ministry November 14, said charges made during the trials that American officials plotted to overthrow the Communist-led Romanian government were based on "political motivation and insincerity."

At the end of the trial, 75-year-old Juliu Maniu, former premier and head of the National Peasant Party, and 18 of his associates were convicted of treason. Maniu received a sentence of life imprisonment.

The Romanian note, signed by Foreign Minister Anna Pauker and delivered to U. S. Minister Rudolf E. Schoenfeld, said the truth of the accusations made at the trial against the American officials was "clearly obvious from the statements made by the accused, from the documents found on the accused and recognized by them and from the acts carried out and confessed.

"The Romanian government . . ." it added, "cannot admit that the act of justice . . . be made the object of discussion of a foreign power."

Full Citizenship Equality Urged By CIO Official

Every block to equality of citizenship must be wiped from the social practices of America and the world, Kermit Eby of the CIO said on a radio talk yesterday.

As guest speaker on the "Americans All" program sponsored by the Institute on Race Relations, over station WQQW, the CIO research and education director said he had learned in 20 years of study that:

"Most of us accept abstract concepts of justice, giev lip service to the ideal that 'all men are created equal' but step aside when specific tests come up."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Simple Precaution Suggested For Night Drivers

Mrs. C. W. Friede of 931 Longfellow st. nw., wonders how many of us take the precaution of locking their auto doors from the inside when they drive at night.

She says the idea never even occurred to her until she stopped for a traffic light at 16th and V sts. nw. the other night.

As she waited, her car door was opened, her purse snatched from the seat, and the thief was gone before there was a chance to stop him.

Mrs. Friede now drives with her car doors locked from the inside, and passes the suggestion along to the rest of us—who haven't as yet encountered the need for such precautions.

In other words: Let's lock the barn door beforehand.

ADD SIGNS

Mrs. H. A. James of 2853 Ontario rd. nw., reminds us that, on the road to Mount Vernon, there's a sign which states a simple truth:

"Roaches Run."

Dave Frank of 219 H st. nw., says there's a store on Rhode Island ave. nw. which displays this sign in its window:

"Fresh Killed Chickens. Sunday Papers Inside."

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. David E. Scull, 101 Elm ave., Takoma Park, Md.: Thanks a lot. When a paper moves various features to new positions, it does so to try to please its readers—but the subscribers we usually hear from are the ones who are displeased with the changes.

Mrs. Norman A. Freudberg, Lexington Park, Md.: Your clipping from one of our afternoon contemporaries makes me wonder whether the Navy really has switched from gun-making to fun-making.

Several weeks ago, a morning paper also referred to it as "the Naval Fun Factory." But I won't believe it's true until I read it in The Washington Post.

ADVICE

Garry Stevenson of 4703 Cooper lane nw., says, "So you think Jay Aitch is the only one who can write short poems, eh? Just for that you'll have to put up with mine."

If you think your job is small
And your rewards are few;
Remember that the mighty oak
Was once a nut, like you.

Johnny Jackson of 1608 Hobart st. nw., is another who demonstrates the ability to get some humor into a short poem:

Left her house—plenty of time
Boarded bus—paid her dime.
Arrived at work—half past nine.
Missed her stop—District Line.

POOR CASHIER!

Addison V. Brandon of 1749 P st. nw. says that on the menu of the Globus Restaurant in Baltimore the other day he saw:

"If you don't say that Mrs. Globus' bread pudding is the finest you ever tasted, tear up the cashier and walk out."

AW, WHAT'S 10 YEARS?

Winifred C. Jackson of 18 Everett st., Kensington, Md., thinks that President Truman can stop worrying about the high cost of living.

Very obviously, prices have now started downward. Mrs. Jackson proves her point by enclosing a classified ad offering a "1949 Buick" for $985.

Gosh—I thought we were still waiting for the 1948 models.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Five puppies, guaranteed to be half Airedale and half carefree." (Hillside 6709.)

"Cute male pup of mixed breed." (Chestnut 7632.)

"Friendly, gentle, affectionate kitten." (Decatur 3647.)

"Doberman puppy, fond of children, wants good home." (Woodley 8195.)

Hal Feyling of 812 K st. se., is another who has been amusing himself with the invention of novel definitions, and he adds these to our collection:

Aggranoyed—Aggravated and annoyed.

Rocuckoo—Cuckoo rococo architecture.

Shingding — Combination shindig and wingding.

HALLOWEEN IS OVER

"My family asks me to write and thank you for improving my disposition in the morning," writes Pauline W. Martin of 7431 8th st. nw.

"They've found that things go much more smoothly if I take time to read The District Line while I'm drinking my coffee. Hubby gets off to work and the children to school, and everybody is happy.

"How about removing the map of the District and replacing it with a map of yourself. Maybe it would add something to the humor of the comic page."

Undoubtedly—but we don't want to frighten our readers.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Warren E. Thomson of 2810 Erie st. se. clips an advertisement from one of our evening contemporaries, and observes, "I don't suppose any comment is necessary." The headline on the ad reads:

"CHAMBERS CUSTOMERS NEVER COMPLAIN."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—One night at the Royale Theater, Beatrice Straight won the critics in her captivating portrayal of Emily Dickinson in "Eastward to Eden." Her friends and relatives were there to cheer her, all except Louis Dolivet, her husband. Dolivet, editor of the United Nations World, had to be at the Greenwich Forum as moderator in a debate between former Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Cord Meyer, jr., the soldier hero who was Stassen's aide at the San Francisco Conference . . . During the debate Wheeler never once mentioned Roosevelt by name, but referred to him as "the then President." . . . Meyer, in return, never once mentioned Wheeler by name, but referred to him as "the then Senator from Montana."

BIRTHDAY DEPARTMENT: Winston Churchill, who will be 73 years old next Sunday, still numbers Anthony Eden among his good friends— despite the fact that Eden is No. 2 man of the Conservative Party and always is being encouraged to try on the No. 1 crown for size. Both men are aware of this situation, and Churchill now confides: "Sometimes, when I want to tease Anthony, I remind him that Mr. Gladstone formed his last administration at the age of 83."

DIPLOMACY DEPT.: General De Gaulle told Churchill: "As long as I have any influence here in France, you are at home here." Their early meetings, however, were unpleasant ones. During a long session in 1941, when De Gaulle addressed Churchill bluntly, the Prime Minister turned on him and delivered a warning in a strange tongue recognizable to both French and English listeners. Churchill said: "Si vous continuer de me interruptere, je vous liquidatere."

MOVIES: Sam Goldwyn's new picture, "The Bishop's Wife," was selected over Douglas Fairbanks' "The Exile," as the one to be exhibited at the Command Performance at Mr. Rank's Odeon Theater in Leicester Square. Each studio submitted a picture, and the selection committee eliminated all except the Goldwyn and Fairbanks pictures . . . "The Exile" is a story of King Charles II, the Stuart. The committee felt that it was too close to the story of the Duke of Windsor, even though Fairbanks changed the ending to show the young King leaving the lady and returning to his royal duties. The committee decided against "The Exile" lest it offend the King and Queen. "We prefer 'The Bishop's Wife,'" said one committee member. "There are no bishops in the Royal Family."

'State Fair' Jolts Communists

By Drew Pearson

Secretary of State George Marshall, who ought to know something about Communist propaganda, takes an opposite view from the House Un-American Activities Committee regarding propaganda in American films. He seems to think Hollywood has a pretty good job.

Johnston

At an informal luncheon with Sam Goldwyn and Movie Czar Eric Johnston, Marshall recalled an incident from his stay in China.

One evening he invited Chou En-lai, the No. 2 Chinese Communist, to his home in Chungking for a movie. The feature was "State Fair," a musical of rural life in Ohio.

Afterward, Communist Chou incredulously asked: "Is that the way farmers live in America?"

Marshall admitted that it may have been given an overdose of Technicolor but explained that it gave a fairly accurate picture of conditions of a typical Ohio farm. Poker-faced Chou could not hide the deep impression this made upon him.

At the same luncheon Army Chief of Staff Ike Eisenhower joined Marhall in praising the movies for the moral and patriotic uplift they gave the Nation during the war.

Bored with talking shop, Sam Goldwyn turned the conversation away from pictures. With a chuckle, he told about the time he took the late Calvin Coolidge to visit William Randolph Hearst's ranch in California.

"We have walking, riding, swimming, tennis," recited Hearst, wanting to entertain his distinguished guest. "What would you like to do, Mr. President?"

"Sit," said the laconic Mr. Coolidge.

European Aid Rift

The Senate and House are slowly drifting apart in their plans for stopgap aid to Europe. First hint of the rift cropped up behind closed doors after the Senate and House Foreign Committees pulled out of joint conference and went to work in their separate chambers at the opposite ends of the Capitol.

On the House side, Ohio Republican John Vorys hit upon the idea of tacking stopgap aid on to the European relief bill, passed last summer, as an amendment. Vorys told fellow Republican Chris Herter of Massachusetts that this would save drafting a new bill, thereby cutting precious time.

Chairman Charles Eaton of New Jersey then polled members of his House Foreign Affairs Committee and telephoned Senate Chairman Arthur Vandenberg that the House Committee favored Vorys' suggestion. When Vandenberg reported this to a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, however, it brought immediate opposition from Senator Elbert Thomas, Utah Democrat, and Minority Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky.

"This emergency aid," argued the soft-spoken Utahan, "is a preface to the Marshall Plan. We should make a clean break with the past."

His arguments were so convincing that, by unanimous vote, the Senate Committee rejected Vorys' idea of an amendment to last summer's European relief bill.

Private Aid to Europe

President Truman is digging deeper than the Marshall Plan to find food for Europe. Not only is he calling upon Congress, but non-Government agencies as well. When he heard that several private relief agencies were joining forces in an all-ont drive for contributions, he summoned Lee Marshall, head of the coordinating body, to the White House. This over-all agency is called American Overseas Aid and is working closely with the official United Nations Appeal for Children.

Writing to Marshall, who is also head of the Continental Baking Co., President Truman declared that the American Overseas Aid program has "my official endorsement and the warm and enthusiastic support of all of us who know peace and security cannot be built on want and privation."

While the letter to Marshall was not sent with the idea it would get into print, the President's words were just as stirring as if addressed to the entire Nation.

"Millions of people, particularly children helpless and suffering in lands laid waste by war, need assistance now if they are to survive," he wrote. "We must try to help them through this crisis."

Later Marshall called at the White House and explained that American Overseas Aid was working on an ambitious program to collect one day's wages from every worker in America. It had the indorsement of both the CIO and AFL, he said. Slogan for the drive, he told the President, would be: "Give Them This Day . . ."

"Here is an opportunity for United States to show what can do for the world, com with what Russia is doing fo world," Marshall told the I dent.

TWO STORES OF NATIONALLY FAMOUS MERCHANDISE

Emmaline Samuel—First woman to ever be elected President of the Oklahoma State Society . . . is employed in the Bonds Division of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Before coming to Washington 14 years ago, she was very active in civic affairs in her home town of Pryor, Oklahoma.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

OKLAHOMA . . . the "sooner" state

We extend a hearty Western Welcome to our many friends who plan to visit Oklahoma—Oklahoma, land of vast fertile plains, huge cattle and wheat ranches, great oil fields . . . and modern cities. Oklahoma, which means "Home of the Red Man," was populated by white settlers in the sensational "run" of '89. Some areas of Oklahoma, the size of our smaller States were settled within 24 hours. The hopes of the homesteaders, who rushed to make their homes in Oklahoma, have been amply rewarded. From the soil of Oklahoma has sprung great wealth in oil, agriculture and livestock—and we have enormous resources—agricultural, mineral and industrial—as yet untouched. One of Oklahoma's outstanding contributions to world progress has been her development of oil drilling techniques, which have made it possible to take formerly inaccessible quantities of this important fuel from the earth. Our oil experts have traveled all over the world to share their knowledge and skills with other Nations. The Oklahoman is imbued with a will to make the fullest use of the State's natural resources, and with a spirit of optimism and high faith in the future. Our faith in Youth is demonstrated by our twenty State-supported schools and universities . . . a secure investment in the future welfare of the citizens of our State. We appreciate the patriotic interest of The Hecht Company in dedicating this page to our young enterprising State. We feel that Oklahoma—a boom State, which has grown with tremendous strides—is now just on the threshold of her greatest achievements.

Emmaline Samuel.

President Oklahoma State Society

OKLAHOMA . . . Colorful, young Southwestern State, one of the greatest boom States in our history . . . with tremendous wealth derived from oil, wheat and cattle. In her 40 years of Statehood, which she commemorated last week, Oklahoma has developed modern urban centers . . . rich farm areas . . . and great public institutions of culture and learning.

OKLAHOMA . . . Scene of the greatest land rush in history. When the territory was opened to homesteaders at noon on April 22, 1889 . . . by a volley of shots fired as a signal . . . 50,000 people swarmed in during one day. The term "Sooners" was born . . . applied to eager settlers who had "jumped the gun." Similar great "runs" followed through the next 20 years as other parts of this rich territory were opened for settlement. "89'ers Day" is still celebrated by Oklahomans.

OKLAHOMA . . . With the biggest population of Indians in the United States . . . many of them prosperous from the discovery of oil on their land. In 1834, all of Oklahoma was set aside as a home for Indians migrating from the Southeast . . . until 1889 when the territory was officially opened to the White Man. The annual Indian Exposition is still held at Andarko to demonstrate the Indians' contribution to Oklahoma's cultural heritage. The home of Sequoyah . . . leader in tribal affairs of the Indian Nation . . . noted for his scholarly attainments . . . and the inventor of the Cherokee alphabet . . . is preserved by the Oklahoma Historical Society.

OKLAHOMA . . . A great oil reservoir for the Nation. Five and one-quarter billion barrels of "black gold" have flowed from Oklahoma wells in 54 years. Today Oklahoma is fourth in U. S. oil production and petroleum refining is one of her biggest industries. Many Oklahoma cities pump oil within their city limits . . . oil wells gush on the grounds of the State Capitol at Oklahoma City. Tulsa is called "The Oil Capital of the World."

OKLAHOMA . . . Historically a great cattle country . . . famed for her pure-bred beef cattle . . . with meat packing a major industry. Fourth in U. S. wheat production, the State is a big flour milling center. She is first in broom corn, high in turkeys, grows peanuts . . . oats . . . corn . . . popcorn . . . sorghums . . . and potatoes. Oklahoma is also first in zinc mining in the country . . . and is a leader in zinc smelting. Glass products are manufactured from her native sands.

OKLAHOMA . . . Abounds in scenic beauty. The dinosaur and petrified wood quarries in Cimarron County offer a glimpse into the prehistoric. Oklahoma's other great natural wonders include the world's largest cypress tree, two million years old . . . the Alabaster Caverns of multi-colored beauty . . . and the Great Salt Plain, residue from an inland sea. Tulsa boasts a Municipal Rose Garden, with 6,000 individual plants.

OKLAHOMA . . . Whose noted people depict the spirit of the State . . . from "Pawnee Bill" (Major Gordon W. Lillie) of Wild West show fame . . . to Lynne Riggs, of Cherokee blood, who wrote "Green Grow the Lilacs," from which came the Broadway musical, "Oklahoma." One of Oklahoma's best-known sons was America's beloved cowboy-humorist, Will Rogers . . . friend of Presidents and world-wide ambassador of good will . . . a monument to his memory stands at his home in Claremore.
